" Centre of Excellence in the Subject of Traditional Sastras"

FOREWORD

It gives me immense pleasure to write a few lines in way of foreword to the volume X of Vaikhanasa Agama Kosa containing the Prayaschitta Prakaranam (Part-I). This volume, like others, is also a visible outcome of the tireless offorts and intellectual exercises of the scholars working in Agama Kosa project of our University. The Rashtriya Sanskrit University has been able to produce and present nine volumes of Agama Kosa (Vaikahanasa) before the world of scholars and researchers. Before producing each volume, the entire gamut of literature pertaining to Agama Scriptures is ransacked, reviewed and revisited by the researchers working in the project and the cream portions of the vast Agama literature are being projected in the form of encyclopaedia in a systematic and disciplined manner. This is the reason why all the volumes of Vaikhanasa Agama Kosa, published so far have earned the appreciation of the learners, researchers and scholars of the country and abroad. In order to make the book more accessible to a wider range of scholars, an exhaustive summary of the concerned volume is given in Sanskrit & English in the beginning and this is, no doubt, a useful addition to the book.

The present volume of the Vaikhanasa Agama Kosa deals with the Prayaschitta Prakaranam. The theme of the volume has been divided into five areas i.e. i) Atonement for defects in temple construction ii) Atonement for defects in Image-making iii)Atonement for installation defects iv) Expiation for defects in Routine-worship and v) Atonement for flaws in Ablution. All these things have been described elaborately in the present volume. The editors, while preparing this reliable document, have referred to so many scriptures and research papers available in the concerned field. All the relevant portions and quotations have been carefully chosen and incorporated in the book to make it more dependable.

In our tradition, Prayaschittam or atonement, plays a vital role particularly in respect of bringing reforms to one's commission and omission of various acts. To err is human and in the process of doing some work, committing some major or minor mistakes, sometimes knowingly or unknowingly, is inevitable. Our ancient sages and seers, with an intention to make work more perfect, pure and scientific, have prescribed some actionable procedures to overcome the defects or lapses. Moreover, some times there occur incidences like earthquakes etc., which are beyond human control for which expiations are prescribed. In addition, some special rituals are prescribed for benevolent results also. This procedure is called 'Prayaschittam' or atonement. While constructing the temples, carving the images or installing them on a raised platform or performing the daily rituals or offering Naivedyam, the persons engaged in the respective processes are likely to make some mistakes or come across with some unforeseen circumstances. In that situation, the authors of the Agama Sastras have prescribed some specific atonement of removal of specific defects. These procedures are supposed to be followed in the temples with a view to bringing perfection to the rituals. Needless to mention that all these things have been neatly narrated in this volume for which the scholars associated with the process of preparation and publication of this book, deserve appreciation from all quarters. This publication, I am sure, will cater to the needs of the readers and researchers in the same way in which the previous volumes have done. The University, indeed, is feeling proud and honoured to bring out such prestigious and useful publications intended to preserve and promote the cardinal principles of our glorious culture and hoary traditions.

I wish the publication a great success.

Summary of the
9. Prāyaśchitta Prakaraṇam
Part I

1.Atonement for defects in Temple-Construction

Prāyaḥ means defect; Cittam means its removal. Whatever defects take place due to mistake in ritual act or due to incapacity or due to unseen reason, the atonement, thereof is possible to be done with the help of recitation of chants, offering of oblation etc. That is called expiation or atonement. It is essential for achievement of the desired fruit of ritual acts. Just as the cure of disease is achieved by medicine, likewise the cure or pacification of the flaws, like deficiency of excess or omission during performance of rituals is to be done with the help of atonement. At the time of ritual procedure, in case there is a vision of inauspicious omens, such as earthquake etc., even though the defects are already indicated, it is necessary to perform atonement by conducting fire-oblation etc. By mistaken ritual, the fruit in the form of peace, happiness and prosperity which is desired would not take place. On the contrary, some mishap, in the form of famine, epidemic or danger from enemy, thieves etc.,

would occur in the country. Therefore, in respect of Vedic rituals, whenever there is distortion of ritual or distortion of the doer or lapse of Mantras, lapse of material or miscalculation of time and also shortage or excess in ritual performance, and also undesirable admixture of procedure, and in all such cases, pacificatory atonement rituals have been prescribed in Āgamic lore.

In respect of the ritual of soil-testing etc., if seed-sowing for sprouts is not done, then, he should perform fire-fumigation with the Mantras pertaining to six Gods Brahmā etc., Mantras pertaining to Viṣṇu as well as the iconic Mantras pertaining to the presiding deities of the earthen vessels; Pālikā etc., and the Mantras pertaining to the attendants: Jaya etc. Then, after offering of sprouts, the priest should conduct respective ritual acts. In the event of lapse of special worship, the priest should offer worship two times. At the time of sprout offering, he should perform special worship on the service-idol. In respect of the idols which are part of other shrines, for the sake of festival etc., when sprouting is provided, the special worship is to be done to the stationary idol only. Fire-fumigation is to be performed with the chants, pertaining to the image of Paṅktīśa, in the event of lapse of dimension of the row.

In the case of rituals, preceded by sprout-offering, if the sprout-offering is to be done instantly, then on previous night, Adhivāsana may be done, in advance, on previous night alone. Thereafter, having performed eye-opening rite, the priest should conduct the rituals, such as Vāstu-Homa etc. In case, adequate time is not obtained even within two days, then, having performed sprout offering, the rituals like eye-opening etc. should be conducted.

At the time of exit from outer door, for the purpose of soil-testing; if some obstacle occurs, then having performed pacificatory fumigation, the priest should recite the chant pertaining to Viṣṇu, one hundred times. He should also recite Vighna-Mantra (obstacle-remover chant), one hundred times. At that time, if some evil utterance happens to be heard, the priest should recite the chant pertaining to Sarasvatī and proceed after meditating over God. In case of eruption of quarrel or blood shade or fire-burn, the priest should perform the fumigation in mundane fire, with the help of chants pertaining to Viṣṇu, Soma, Viṣvaksena, Sudarśana, or Garuḍa. He should also recite the chant, pertaining to Vaiśvānara fire. On the occasion of soil-testing if some bad omen takes place, he should perform fumigation with Vaiṣṇava chants, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta and thereafter he should repeat Viṣṇu Gāyatrī as well as Sāvitrī hymns, eight hundred times. Then he should repeat Śākuna-sūkta and Svasti-sūkta, ten times.

In the event of lapse of soil testing and also the lapse of order of ploughing-rite or lapse of finding prescribed food-grain, or lapse of plough or in absence of feeding the herd of cows with fodder, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Saumya and Vaiṣṇava hymns and conduct each ritual, afresh. In the event of breakage of fire at the time of soil-testing, having performed Homa by chanting Saumya and Vaiṣṇava hymns, the priest should offer oblation into mundane fire, while reciting the hymns pertaining to Sudarśana and Varuṇa.

For the lapse of feeding the maidens, fire fumigation with chants pertaining to Durgā is to be performed. In the event of breakage of the lamp held by a maiden as well as in the event of falling down of lotus, fire fumigation by chanting Śrī-sūkta is to be performed. In the event of erosion of earthen soil the priest should offer full oblation as well as offer Mindāhuti and recite Bhū-sūkta. In the event of conducting ploughing without undertaking soil examination, then after performance of fumigation with the recitation of Bhū-sūkta, the priest should carry out ploughing right after conducting soil test. In case, sacrifice addressed to Viṣṇu has begun without completion of soil-test, then after having offered one thousand oblations into fire and after conducting sacrifice addressed to Bhūmi and after offering fire oblations addressed to spirits, the priest should donate four bulls by way of alms (to Brahmins). Initially, adoration of Ganeśa is to be done. In the event of soil-testing, being untimely conducted, or if either laspe of ritual or distortion thereof has been conducted either by tillers or seed-sowers, the priest should perform the prescribed Homa, two times and then worship the god. In lapse of that ritual, he should perform Homa by offering oblations, hundred times alongwith that chant.

In the event of non-availability of prescribed tree for preparation of yokes etc., the priest should perform fire-fumigation addressed to Earth, Viṣṇu, Rudra and the deities pertaining to oneself; and he should offer alms. Having worshipped the Lord, the priest should deck the Lord with gold ornaments. In the event of non-availability of prescribed trees for preparation of ploughs etc., or in case of lack of proportion, the priest should perform fire fumigation addressed to Viṣṇu, Soma, Agni and Prajāpati. Then he should adore the presiding Lord of trees. Thereafter, having prepared ploughs etc., with gold, he should carry out the ritual. In the event of lapse of proportion of yokes etc., the priest should conduct fire-fumigations addressed to Viṣṇu, Prajāpati, Yama and Rudra. In case the pair of bulls are wanting in limbs, then fumigation is to be conducted with the chants pertaining to Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Garuḍa, Prajāpati, spirits, seers, etc.; then he should bring two other bulls. At the time of ploughing, if the bull is wounded due to fault, then fire-fumigation is to be conducted with the help of the two hymns; Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. Thereafter Mindāhuti is to be performed. Then he should offer alms to the preceptor in the measure which is more than one Niṣka of gold. At the time of ploughing, if the bull gets sleep or is fainted, confounded, baffled or falls down or starts crying, then the priest should perform fumigation with Viṣṇu Gāyatrī and offer alms. In the event of lapse of worship of two deities; Viṣvaksena and Anapāyin, the fire oblation addressed to Viṣṇu as well as the fire-fumigation addressed to Viṣvaksena and Anapāyin respectively should be performed. Even in the cases of lapse of worship of Garuḍa, Sudarśana, and Amita that is Ganeśa etc., the fire-fumigation addressed to that individual deity has to be performed. The fire-fumigation is to be performed, respectively with Varuṇa-mantra, in the event of breakage of the rope, with Śrī-mantra in the event of Earth-cleavage and with the chant addressed to Goddess Jyeṣṭhā, in the event of crack developed in sickle. At the time of ploughing if Yokes etc. are crakced, then the priest should perform Homa by chanting the mantra: ato deva etc. and the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Prajāpati, Garuḍa and Bhūtas and give alms in terms of silver. At the time of ploughing if the plough etc. are broken or craked or if the rope is cut, the expiation is to be conducted on par with that prescribed for lack of dimenstion of plough. At the time of ploughing, if there is lapse of recitation of the Mantra, then the fumigation addressed to Viṣṇu, Rudra and Sarasvatī is to be performed. In case such items as scull, bone, chaff, hair, ant-hill or admixture of mud etc., is noticed, then having removed that and having sprinkled the land with five cow products, the priest should perform fire-fumigation addressed to Soma, sacred Fire and Viṣṇu. He should also perform fumigation addressed to Earth as well as fumigation addressed to Vāstu. The priest should offer alms in the form of food grains, to the Brahmins, after serving food crop to the herd of cows after performance of Homa-rite, pertaining to Soma and Viṣṇu, by way of normal expiation for removal of the defects, crept in soil-examination etc. By way of atonement of common defects while soil-testing etc,. the priest should perform Homas addressed to Soma and Viṣṇu and then having offered grass to herd of cows, he should offer food-grains to Brahmins. In the case of lapse of ploughing or lapse of timely seed-sowing, Homa is to be performed while chanting the hymns pertaining to Rātri, Viṣṇu and Godāna. In the event of noticing hair, teeth etc. in the food-grains, the priest should discard all that and then sprinkle the seeds with holy ashses and offer oblation into Padma-fire while chanting Rātri-sūkta.

If some defect arises after the ritual of sowing seeds (for sprouting), the priest should sow the seeds again after the performance of Homa addressed to the land. If the presentation of herd of cows is omitted, then having performed Homa rituals named; Viṣṇu, Viṣvaksena, Garuḍa and Sudarśana, the priest should serve Palāla fodder to the herd of cows. In case there is lapse of prey-offering to the deities presiding over various grids of Vāstu-Maṇḍala diagram, the priest should worship with the prey-offering after performance of Homa rites pertaining to the deities; Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Vasu, Yama, Varuṇa and Kubera. If the rituals of [1]samurta, [2]haraka and stone collection are omited then then Homa is to be performed after rectiting Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-sūkta, four times. If by mistake, undesirable admixture of ritual acts takes place, then Homa rite by chanting Vyāhṛtis is to be performed. If the priest happens to complete the ritual acts of soil-testing etc., and also of establishing first brick or stone slab and also ritual retention etc., in a single day and instantly in haste, then Homa rite has to be performed along with the recitation of Vaiṣṇava-sūkta Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta. In case untimely ploughing is done then Bhūmi-Homa has to be conducted. In the cases of lapse of ploughing or lapse of timely sowing of seeds is done, then Homa-rite is to be conducted with the help of following hymns: Rātri, Viṣṇu and Godāna. In the event of omission of sowing of seeds, the priest should perform the sowing of seeds after conducting the Homa rites pertaining to Viṣṇu, Soma and Vāyu, in respective order.

In case, there occurs inversion of duties of the host-performer and the preceptor, then having performed Homa of four items Nyakṣa etc. (grass, fuel-sticks etc.) he should also perform Homa-rite with the recitation of Viṣṇu-sūkta and Vaiṣṇava-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. In case the seeds, which are sown, do not sprout, due to barrenhood, then the priest should perform expiation, prescribed for the lapse of ploughing and sowing of seeds and thereafter, having fed grass to herd of cows, he should perform the whole ritual, once again. In case, untimely soil-examination has been conducted or if there is lapse of ritual, committed by the ploughing-servants or those servants who have sown the seeds or if some mistake has been committed by them, then the priest should worship God, after offering oblation to fire, in the double quantity of that, prescribed for Homa-rite.

At the time of digging the ground, for construction of the temple, if some thorns or lumps of soil or stone pieces are noticed, then the priest should perform Homa-rites pertaining to Viṣṇu, Brahmā and five deities, presiding over the land.

During the process of soil-examination, if the rite of preparation of the lotus-shaped pit, at the locus of Brahmā, then the Homa with Bhū-sūkta has to be performed. So also the Homa-rites pertaining to Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Varuṇa are to be done. Again, if objects like scull, bones etc., are noticed, then after performing Homa-rites pertaining to the deities; Viṣṇu, Bhūmi and Brahmā should be done. If the water collected in the pit of the shape of Brāhmic lotus is noticed to be rotating leftwards, then the Homa-rites pertaining to Varuṇa, Vāyu and Bhūmi have to be performed. Two Homa-rites pertaining respectively to Varuṇa and Viṣvaksena have to be performed in the contingency of water indicating vibration, shaking or being covered by dust. Two more Homa-rites pertaining to Brāhma-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta are also to be performed. If the water is stagnated, then the priest should perform the Homa-rite pertaining to Brahmā, Bhūmi, Varuṇa and Garuḍa, respectively. If the level of the lotus-shape of the pit has become uneven in upper and lower level, then the priest should offer Homa-oblations addressing the deities:

Brahmā, Varuṇa and Bhṛgu. If the lotus which is superimposed gets cracked, then both Prājāpatya as well as Vaiṣṇava types of Homa have to be performed. Similarly if the lotus is displaced towards sub direction, the Homa pertaining to Brahmā as well as Ṛṣis is to be performed. The same Homas i.e. Brāhma and Ārṣa have to be performed, even in the case of burst of the lotus motive. In the event of the crack placed in the pitcher like pit having the shape of Brāhmic Lotus or in the event of leakage in it or in the event of spell of fear among people or else in the event of mob quarrel and blood shade, the priest should perform Homa- rites pertaining to Viṣvaksena, Garuḍa, Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Indra, as well as Homa-rites, with the help of Rātri-sūkta and Prajāpati-sūkta. If no pacification is conducted for ill-omen, then having fed one hundred Brahmins, the host should offer alms to the Vedic priests.

At the time of preparation of gnomon-peg, after striking twice, the priest should perform two Homas; pertaining to Pariṣaṭ i.e., assembly as well as pertaining to all gods. In case the gnomon is cracked or lost or it is distorted, having performed the Homa addressed to presiding deities of (eight) directions, the architect should do demarcation of directions. If the gnomon is cracked he should perform Homa addressed to Viṣṇu and Brahmā. In the event of breakage of the chord, the Homa-rites pertaining to Yama, Vāyu and Viṣṇu have to be performed. If the fixing of the gnomon is omitted, then Pariṣaṭ-Homa is to be performed.

During construction of the temple, if the beginning is made by the main path of action, if subordinate path is resorted to, then after appeasing the Lord and having performed pacificatory Homa and having given alms, the priest may worship the god. In the contingency of demarcation of directions, the priest should perform two Homas: Vaiṣṇava and Saura and then he should conduct demarcation of the directions. If a miniature metallic idol is not available for the miniature temple, then he should request for such an idol either from the home of a Vedic Brahmin or from some other shrine. If it happens to be conforming the stationary image, then having installed it by way of service-idol, he should worship it; in case it is previously worshipped in some other temple, then after the completion of the temporary job, he should again carry it into the previous temple, and having performed pacificatory fumigation, he should worship it, thereover. Conversely, if that image is not suitable, then after performing Vaiṣṇava Homa, the priest should install the auspicious service-idol alone. In the eventuality of non-availability of mundane metallic image also, the sculptor may make it even with wood. Subsequent to the installation of stationary image, he should install the mundane idol within the first enclosure and then worship the same. In the contingency of non-construction of the miniature temple at all, everything becomes in vain. For that, the priest should offer oblations into fire with the chanting of the Mantras of Rātri-sūkta and Pāramātmika-sūkta. He should donate bulls as well as monetary alms. If the selected location is destined for another god, then having performed pacificatory Homa only, the priest may install the God of gods in His place. However, if a particular location is designated for the God of gods, then the priest should not select it for any other God.

In case of constructing temple without laying first brick, there would occur great loss to the village to the host as well as to the country. there for, having performed mega-pacificatory rite he should arrange to construct temple after laying first brick.

In case the ritual of Homa, meant for the site is missed, then he should perform Pāñcabhautika, Vaiṣṇava and Vyāhṛti Homas, respectively. Then he should offer oblations into fire ten times after reciting Vāstu Mantras. In case the dimension of the first brick or first stone slab is either less or more than two, Homa-rites by recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-sūkta have to be performed. At the time of placing the first brick, if gem-depositing is missed, then the priest should perform fire-oblation, in the serial order of chanting Vaiṣṇava hymm, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, Mindāhuti, Mahī-sūkta and Vicchinna-mantra. He should also perform Homa by chanting the Mantras pertaining to the presiding deity of Gems. In case, there occurs inversion of placement of the top of the stone-slab and brick, then the priest should offer oblation into fire in the serial order of reciting the hymns, pertaining to all gods, Vaiṣṇava, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta as well as pair of oblations named Mindāhuti followed by Mahī-sūkta and Vicchinna respectively. In the eventualities of inversion of the top of the brick, inversion of wood, presence of defect in the tip of the bottom of the stone slab as well as omission of fashioning some component of temple-super structure, inversion of the panel-door and the wall etc., or omission thereof, the priest should perform Homa with the Mantras named Nyakṣa etc. If there is confusion in chanting the Mantra prescribed for depositing the first brick, the priest should perform Homa-rites by recitation of hymns pertaining to all gods, and Viṣṇu as well as Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta and also Mindāhuti, Mahī-sūkta and Vicchinna in due order. In case of unapproved admixture of bricks, the priest should perform Vaiṣṇava Homa. In the event of inversion of the placement of the host and preceptor, the priest may fetch the sacred fire, called Pauṇḍarīka. In case the offering of Dakṣiṇā is missed at the time of placing the brick etc., the priest should perform Āgńeya and Vaiṣṇava Homas and then offer Dakṣiṇā, then he should appease the preceptor. If the whole ritual act of placing the first brick is omitted, then, the priest should offer series of oblations into fire by recitation of Sārva-daivatya and Vaiṣṇava hymns, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta as well as Mindāhuti, Mahī-sūkta and Vicchinna. In the event of lapse of laying first brick of the enclosure wall, then the priest should perform Homa ten times by reciting the hymn pertaining to the presiding deity of the enclosure wall, retinue deities accompained by Vaiṣṇava hymn. If there occurs omission in the placement of the first brick pertaining to the tower-gate, the priest should offer oblation into fire, by reciting the hymns pertaining to the presiding deities over door-gods and six other deities; Dhātā etc. In respect of erection of pavilion, if omission occurs in placement of the first brick, then the priest should offer oblation by reciting the hymns pertaining to the presiding deities of the pavilion and Viṣṇu. In the event of omission of placing the first brick for construction of the kitchen, the priest should offer fire-oblations, by chanting the Mantras pertaining to the protector of oblation as well as the hymns of Goddess-Śrī and Agni and Viṣṇu. At the time of construction of the altar, meant for spirits, if there is omission of first brick, then having initially performed two Homa-rites by chanting the hymns of Bhūta-devatās and Viṣṇu, he should perform the Homas addressed to Bhūtas, Yakṣas, Piśācas and Nāgas. The four bricks are to be established while reciting the first Mantras of each of the four Vedas. There also, if there occurs omission of placing of the first brick, the priest should offer oblations by reciting Bhūta-Mantras as well as Vaiṣṇava Mantras. Thereafter, having established the altar, by recitation of Mantras, appropriate for the ritual retention, having bathed with water and having performed Homa as before, the priest should chant the four initial Mantras of four Vedas in the four directional zones.

If there occurs the omission of depositing of first brick in the construction of shrines, belonging to retinue-deities, the priest should perform the prescribed Homas and then mutter those respective Mantras. In case the vessel containing gems and meant to be deposited in the foundation happens to be either less or more in sites, then the priest should perform Homas pertaining Sūrya, Soma and Agni. In the contingency of non-availability of gems prescribed for depositing in foundation, having spread fire in the surrounding, the priest should worship Viṣṇu who is the lord of gems, on the right side. Thereafter, having performed Homa addressed to both Agni and Soma and having taken one immortal stone and having contemplated over it as - Let this be that each respective item- and having pronounced each respective Mantra, the priest should notionally deposit each respective gem. If all the gems are not available, the priest may get finger-rings made with either gold or silver or copper. Further, if all the said metals are not available, then the priest should procure mercury processed with the ritual act after performing Homas with the recitation of Ātma-sūkta, Śrī-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta. If all the food grains are not available, then having brought barley the priest should perform Homa with Ātma-sūkta and other hymns or else he may perform Homas by reciting hymns pertaining to the deities: Vāyu, Viṣṇu and Soma. If the ritual of depositing gems etc., in the foundation, is itself omitted, then the priest should offer oblations to fire by reciting the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, Viṣṇu-sūkta and the hymns pertaining to two goddesses: Śrī and Bhū. Thereafter, he should perform the ritual of laying foundation in proper procedure. At the time of worship of god if prescribed meterial happen to be omitted, then having performed Homa addressed to the presiding diety of the material of worship

he should collect alternative representative material after performing Homa by reciting hymn addressed to Śeṣa the Cobra-king. In the case of lapse of placing the top brick, the priest should perform the ritual of expiation, prescribed for the omission of depositing first brick. Then, he should also perform ancillary Homa. In the event of omission of lime-plaster and painting or its confusion, Homa is to be conducted with recitation of Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī. If there is lapse in the dimension of the nail of the pinnacle or its base, if prescribed tree is not available, then the priest should perform Homa rites by recitation of the hymns, pertaining to the deities, such as Viṣṇu, Soma, Agni, Śrī and Bhūmi.

In case, there occurs lapse of placing the top brick: either of the shrines of retinue-deities or of tower-gates or if there occurs distortion of paint and plaster, then Vaiṣṇava Homa is to be performed. In case, the construction of temples is executed hastily, then the priest should perform series of rites such as Vāstu-Homa, Paryagni Karaṇa, sprinkling with five cow-products, recitation of auspicious day etc. So also having performed ablution the priest should perform Homas, such as Agni-daivatya, Pariṣaṭ, Aṅga, Pāramātmika, Īṅkāra, Vaiṣṇava and Mahā Vyāhṛti. Then Having installed those respective deities, in the order prescribed in the ritual of Pratiṣṭhā, the priest should perform the final Homa. In case there arises non- approved admixture of building materials at the time of temple-construction or if there is misplacement of the proposed site, the priest should perform Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn and the Mantras pertaining to the presiding deity of the plot. If the Sthapati happens to deposit the material in appropriate region the priest should offer oblation into fire by recitation of the hymns pertaining to Vaiṣṇava and goddesses Śrī and Bhūmi and also Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. Then he should arrange to place the material in proper place. In the cases of deficiency and excess of dimensions of the top brick the priest should execute expiation prescribed for fault in first brick. If there occurs omission of the fixation of the slab of the pinnacle, having placed one brick while chanting Dhruva-sūkta, the priest should deposit gems therein; then after placing four bricks on four main directions and having set up the pinnacle, at the centre, the Sthapati should make it firm by applying mortor. After the completion of the super-structure of the temple, in case the construction of pitcher-dome etc. is missed, then the priest should perform pacificatory Homa. If the prescribed characteristic of the chamber of the pinnacle is omitted, then mega-pacificatory Homa has to be performed. If there is omission of finishing process of the pitcher-dome or if lime-plaster is omitted, for over one month, then series of Homa-rites have to be carried out with recitation of hymns, pertaining to the deities as follows: Viṣṇu, Vaiṣṇava, Puruṣa, Śrī, Bhūmi, as well as Agni.

In case the completion of the temple construction does not end for over twelve years, then having performed planetary sacrifice and special feast for Brahmins, the master host should recommence the work. For the sake of pacification of all the untold defects which have been probably arisen during the range of time: beginning with laying first brick and ending with fixing of pinnacle-nail, the priest should initially perform Homas, by recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, the hymns pertaining to Śrī and Bhūmi goddesses as well as ancillary Homa; and then he should offer oblation into fire addressing the components of the temple beginning with the pinnacle and ending with the foot wear while uttering the chant -Dadbhyaḥ svāha- etc. and then he should perform the Homas pertaining to the deities; Brahmā, Ruḍra, Vināyaka, Agni, Durgā and Prajāpati. On conclusion of the Homa-rite, the priest should mutter the respective Mantras.

If the ornamentation is wanting in the slab and the Vimāna thereover and also if there is deficiency or excess in the dimension of inner door as well as wall, Homa is to be performed with the four Mantras Nyaksa etc. then the priest should offer oblations into fire while chanting Abja Homa , Rātri-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta, for one hundred times and then he should also offer oblation while chanting the ten Mantras -Svasti svāha- etc. If trees, creepers, and grass grows around the Vimāna structure, then having performed Homa addressed to the presiding deity of the trees, the priest should give Dakṣina to the preceptor. Thereafter he should execute renovation at the hands of Shilpi.

If various components of the temple- complex such as enclosure, tower-gate, the altars for the statue of Viṣvaksena and the altar reserved for spirits, the rope-well, garden, kitchen, bath-chamber as well as assembly-hall etc. are deficient in dimension, then the priest should offer oblation into fire, while chanting the Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta as well as hymns addressed to Śrī and Bhūmi and each respective presiding deity of those components. If it is not done, there may occur calamities like termination of lineage, growth of enemies and monetary loss and there may also erupt great danger. If the components like door, pillars, timber, the component fitted in the ground and the door panels are worn out or those are damaged by worms or fire-burnt, then having discarded those and having procured other new components he should fit them as before and then having washed those, at the hands of the Sthapati, the priest should offer oblation into constant fire while reciting the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, Soma and Agni. In case there occurs the mishap of destruction of the door panel, the priest should offer oblation, while chanting the hymns, pertaining to six deities; Dhātā etc. and to Viṣṇu, Goddess Śrī and Bhū, and then arrange to reconstruct the same.

In the case of misplacement about the host-performer, the priest should perform fumigation pertaining to Indra and Rudra. In the case of misplacement of the preceptor, he should conduct the fumigation pertaining to Munis. Actually, whosoever preceptor has been elected, at the commencement of ploughing rite, by him alone, all the ritual acts upto the end of consecration are to be discharged. Thereafter, all the temple-rituals: routine and occasional are to be conducted by him only. Even in respect of ritual acts of temple-festivals etc., the master-host should not elect any other preceptor. In his absence, he may choose, his son or grandson or nephew or else his disciple or disciple's disciple, in his place. The selected preceptor should be such as endowed with the pre-natal sacraments in the Vaikhānasa-sūtra of Vedic heritage. However, in the case of non-availability even of such son-grandson-disciple etc. the host may elect another preceptor, who has been consented, in advance, by prior preceptor, and who is eligible. Otherwise, there may arise calamity to the host as well as the village, wealth may be lost and the worship offered in the temple, may become fruitless.

In the case of such incidents, as censure, cursing or beating of the preceptor and the priestly staff-members, having conducted the fire-ritual addressed to Soma, Rudra and Viṣṇu, and having devotionally served and appeased them, the Yajamāna (host) should execute subsequent ritual course. In the contingency of dispute arising between the host and the preceptor, having conducted the fire-ritual pertaining to Viṣṇu, Brahmā, and the five elements, and having donated gold, animals, land etc. and having appeased the preceptor, the host should resume subsequent ritual course. In the contingency of mutual discord among the group: preceptor, priestly staff and menial staff, and subsequent fury, dejection or confusion on the part of the preceptor, as well as dispute between the preceptor and the host, having conducted simultaneous chanting and fumigation of Mantras, pertaining to Viṣṇu, sages, deities: Viṣvaksena, Indra, and Bṛhaspati, one hundred and eight times, the host should propitiate the preceptor. Then, the preceptor should mutter Omkāra, for one hundred and eight times. Then, he should offer one hundred and eight oblations, into fire, along with the chanting of Vyāhṛti Mantras Om, Bhūḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ.. preceded by Om. For the priest also, the same code of expiation is prescribed. In the extreme eventuality: one of them tending to the daring step of committing suicide, then also the person concerned should practise atonement and then abide by following vow, such as: consumption of single meal, per day, taking nocturnal meal alone; subsistence on ghee alone; consumption of only five cow-products; subsisting on water alone; keeping total fast, or partaking of above items separately on each day, continuing for seven days, he should practise chant-muttering and offering of oblation into fire, after taking bath, on seventh day and then serve food to Brahmins, thereafter. For the person, due to whom such a daring step arose, should also practise the same atonement. However, if the ritual course of worship etc. is continued without fulfilling the expiatory mandate, then having adored God of gods two times, with devotion, after conclusion of expiatory rite, he should offer food-oblation, in double quantity. In the event of enmity amongst the menial workers, the priest should perform Homa, by chanting Vaiṣvaksena hymn.

2. Atonement for defects in Image-making

Even though there is no blame in the event of lapse of dimension in the icon installed in miniature-shrine as well as the ornaments on that idol: yet the priest should install the miniature-icon alongwith recitation of Atma-sūkta and then worship the same. In the contingency of vision of ill-omen, at the time of gathering of wood for the purpose of image-making, the priest or sculptor should take bath and perform mega-pacification fumigation, followed by eight thousand repetitions of eight-syllabled chant (Om namo Nārāyaṇāya) and having purified himself by Sudarśana-chant, and having given alms, he should commence the work. In the event of the collapse of the selected tree towards undesired direction, and consequently, if another suitable tree is not available, then, he should fetch the same tree, after performing mega-pacification-fumigation. In case, the prescribed tree is not available, then having taken another tree, suited for sacrifice, he should offer fire-oblation, with the hymn pertaining to that deity or Vaiṣṇava and Viṣṇu-sūkta.

At the time of collecting the wood, if any mistaken procedure takes place, then the host as well as the preceptor should take bath and offer oblations into fire, by chanting the following: Rātri-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava-Viṣṇu-sūkta and Viśvajit-sūkta. Similarly, at the time of collection of stone or collection of wood, if either no ritual is performed or wrong ritual is performed, then, he should perform fire-oblation-rite, while chanting the following hymns: Vaiṣṇavite, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Mindāhutī and Vicchinna ending with Vyāhṛtis (Om, Bhūḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ etc.). In case, the prescribed stone is not available, then, having lit the pacificatory Homa by chanting Medinī-sūkta etc. as well as the hymns addressed to Directional Lords and having recited the eight-syllabled chant eight thousand times, and having adored Lord Viṣṇu, the host (along with sculptor), should fetch a stone of collyrium-like shinning black colour. If he happens to notice some blemish, in the inner core of the stone, he should carry out Homa-rite with Viṣṇu-gāyatri hymn and fetch another stone-slab. Likewise, if the sculptor has fashioned an idol endowed with apt characteristics, yet without performing prescribed rite for collection of stone-slab, then, the priest should, at first perform Vaiṣṇavite pacificatory rite. And then, after placing that idol on the ground, under cover, he should complete Homa-rite meant for stone-fetching, as well as Vāstu-Homa, and purify it by rotation of fire, around it, and application of five cow-products. Then, having offered prey, around that idol, as in case of the prey-offering rite, forming part of stone-fetching rite, and having adored the gods, he should subsequently pick up that idol and install.

After careful assessment of the front and rear side, as well as appearance: upwards and downwards, of the stone or wood, the sculptor should install the image. Otherwise, great blemish may accrue to the country, king as well as the host-performer, as also there may arise affliction, disease or death to people. Hence, having performed Homa-fumigation in the fire named Abja i.e. Pauṇḍarīka, alongwith recitation of Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Īṅkāra etc. and also having performed ancillary Homa-rite. Pañca-Vāruṇa-Homa, as well as Homa-rites pertaining to the assembly-deities: Jaya etc. he should install the idol as per proper procedure. In the cases of lack of Mantra or lack of waxing process, the priest is to fumigate alongwith chanting of the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Prajāpati, Paṅktīśa, Soma, Sarasvatī, Agni, Viṣṇu, accompanied by the Vyāhṛti chants. If some lapse, distortion of technical procedure creeps in at the time of incorporation of the material ingredients, such as: wood, clay, thread, gravel, cloth and colours etc. the priest should conduct pacificatory rite and taking permission from the Lord, he should deliver the alms. In case the sculptor happens to glean soil which is polluted by birds, dogs, unworthy animals, monkey, pig, rat, etc., having discarded that soil and having collected another soil, he should offer oblation to fire, while reciting the hymns, pertaining to Bhūmi, Paramātman and the Vaiṣṇavite chants: Īṅkāra etc. At the time of sculpting the idol, if something of the items, such as oil, liquid, powder or astringent herbs has missed or there occurs distortion of procedure, and also if there is omission in serial order of the process of wrapping of the threads, application of eightfold cementing items, clay-plaster, smearing of processed gravel, covering with cloth and beautification etc., misplacement of colour-application, the priest should offer oblation into fire, alongwith the chanting of Vaiṣṇava hymn (Viṣṇor nu kam..), Puruṣa-sūkta, and hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Indra, Agni, deities presiding over five gross elements, Prajāpati, and ending with Vyāhṛtis. Likewise, if artificial paint happens to be coated on the icon (by the painter), out of ignorance, then the sculptor should wash it off with water mixed with the resin, oozed out of Kapittha fruit and thereafter offer oblation into fire, with the recitation of the hymns: Vaiśvānara-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta (ato devā) and those pertaining to Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Jaya. Thereafter, the painter may paint the icon with whatever colour has been prescribed thereof. In case, there is deficiency in the dimension, prescribed for the pikes supporting the icon, amounting to two, three, four, five or six barley-width, then, after supplementing the gap with copper, the priest should offer ancillary Homa-rite by reciting Vaiṣṇava and Puruṣa hymns, followed by the utterance: - dadbhyaḥ svāhā-. In the eventuality of chant-less studding of gems, the priest may offer oblation, by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn. In case, there is misplacement of fixing the pikes, supporting the stationary idol, the priest should offer oblation into fire with the hymn-chanting pertaining to Brahmā, Rudra, Viṣṇu, Puruṣa and the concluding chants of Vyāhṛits, one thousand times, and then feed the Brahmins after giving them alms.

In the cases of omission of setting of pike, or omission of installation of the stationary idol or omission of the stationary idol itself, ghostly spirits may impose residence in the temple. Therefore, the priest should perform Vāstu-Homa-rite as well as mega-Śāntī-Homa. Then, he should donate gold, animals and land etc. When one month has passed over, the completion of temple-construction-work, this expitation is prescribed for the lapse of fixing pikes thereto. The quantum of expiation is to be double, for two months and the ratio of increase of the quantum should stretch upto the limit of one year. When one year has lapsed, then, the priest should conduct fire-rite, by offering one thousand oblations, beginning with the Homa call mega-pacification and followed by hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Rudra and Viṣṇu and then arrange for alms in the form of gold, animals and land and for feast to Brahmins. He should install the pike, after reciting the respective chant of each individual chant, pertaining to first set of bricks.

Subsequent to the fixing of pikes, if there happens lapse of ritual regarding installation of stationary idol, then, the priest should offer oblation to fire while chanting Viṣṇu-sūkta, Vicchinna and Mindāhūtī, he should offer land-donation to the preceptor. This expitational rite is meant for one month passing over the lapse and its double in the case of two months. He should go on increasing the quantum for continuation of lapse upto one year's limit. When one year has passed over, then, after offering oblations, ending with pouring of ghee, followed by one thousand oblations and oblations along the chanting of Vaiṣṇava hymn (Viṣṇor nu kam..), Viṣṇu-sūkta (ato devā) and the hymns addressed to directional Lords(Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirṛti, Varuṇa, Vāyu, Kubera and Īśāna), he should donate Dakṣiṇā. After the lapse of second year, he should conduct double course and if twelve years happen to pass over, then he should conduct all the rites; beginning with ploughing etc. Then, he should offer oblation into fire, by reciting the Vedic Mantras: Kūṣmāṇḍa, Pañca-vāruṇa, Pāramātmika, Īṅkāra, by way of ancillary Homa and by recitation of Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta and serve meals to Brahmins.

It is a rule that one should not construct semi-three-dimensional stationary idol with clay. The idol made of gold, silver, copper, stone, wood or gems is approved. If the stationary idol is made of bricks, and it is not cemented by lime or it is fashioned out of eunch species of tree or eunch stone or if it is blended with iron-powder or stone-powder, or with garlic-oil or assophotida-mixed oil or if it is made of baked earth or if it is devoid of thread-wrapper on the pikes, or if it is deficient in soil or processed gravel-pulp or if it is either lacking in proportion or wanting in prescribed paint or it is devoid of ornamentation and if it is installed in that condition, then it culminates into Ābhicārika type i.e. the icon used for sorcery etc. The priest should instantly discard the same and conduct fire-oblations alongwith the recitation of Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, the hymns pertaining to Śrī and Bhūmi and that beginning with - yad devādīn

- and those pertaining to Brahmā, Rudra, Indra, Agni, Varuṇa and omni-gods and Supreme God. This mega-pacification is efficacious in pacification of all defects.

Some experts opine that the semi-three-dimensional metallic as well as wooden idol is prohibited. In the contingency of the stationary idol, having been fashioned in mal-convention, wrong characteristics, mis-application, or if it is inappropriate or deformed or colourless, then, having abandoned that, the master may install another one. Then, having performed ancillary Homa-rite after pouring of ghee, and having offered oblations, addressed to all the inmates of the temple-premises, the priest should offer oblation into fire while reciting Viṣṇu-sūkta, Brāhmic hymn, Puruṣa-sūkta as well as hymns pertaining to Vaiṣṇava faith (Viṣṇor nu kam..) and meant for offering lotuses in Homa-rite and also the hymn addressed to Supreme Lord. He should then give alms to Brahmins and serve them meals. In the case of idol installed in the Daivika or Ārṣa sectors of the sanctum, the icon; lacking in conventional norms, or characteristic features or proportion is not blamable.

In whatever course, out of nine (optional) courses, the temple happens to be fashioned, the stationary idol should be fashioned either to correspond to that norm or be more than that, but never proportionately less than that. In the contingency of misappropriation, relating to the temple or to the idol, or in case of misplacement of timber used for pike, as also in the case of inversal of plan and execution etc., the priest should conduct fumigation with the help of the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Garuḍa, Soma, Prajāpati and Rudra, for thousand times; and then serve meals to Brahmins. He may also offer honorary alms to them as per affording capacity. If there occurs, omission relating to proportions etc., of the idols, in miniature adhoc shrine, he should perform fire-oblation by reciting Ātma-sūkta. If there occurs, inversion of form of the stationary idol, or in the event of dimensional deficiency, he should conduct mega-pacificatory ritual of sacrifice, for three days. The priest should manage to make the stone-made stationary idol, endowed with clothes, ornaments, weapons, sacred thread etc. If the same is wrongly done, then, having removed it, and having got other set prepared, the priest should offer oblations into fire, by chanting hymns pertaining to Vaiṣṇava faith, Brahmā, Indra, Soma and Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta and then serve meals to Brahmins.

Prior to the ritual of acquatic retention (of the idol), in case, loss of some limb of the stationary idol takes place, then, the priest should perform the fire-oblation with Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, the hymns addressed to Śrī, Bhūmi and other deities, as well as the chant - dadbhyaḥ svāhā- etc. and then he should give honorafic alms to the preceptor. After examining the idol, carefully, the sculptor should make the limb fit for joinery. If the master-host has financial affordability, then he may procure new idol. In the event of loss of limb, occurring after the completion of acquatic retention, the priest may perform fumigatory rite with Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Śrī-Bhūmi-sūktas, and also hymns pertaining to Brahmā and Rudra, and also the -Manyor- Mantra and then either install the same idol after cementing joinery or procure another idol and install it.

When the temple-construction is complete, either due to ignorance or due to avarice for money, if service-idol is installed without installation of stationary idol, then that idol turns to be exorcive. In that case, after performing of mega-pacificatory fumigation, for three days, and after feeding Brahmins, he should seek pardon from God, by praying 'kindly pardon'. Then he should install the deity for sometime in the miniature shrine, subsequently, he should install the stationary idol or stationary and service-idol together. If there happens some transgression of installatory rite, the priest should conduct a week-long mega-pacificatory fumigation. Like-wise, if the priest happens to install a service-idol, after sculpting it with miscellaneous or non-prescribed metal, then having instantly discarded it, the priest should conduct fire-oblational rite by reciting following hymns: pertaining to Soma, Agni, Garuḍa and also Īṅkāra etc. divine assembly, Puruṣa, Viṣṇu, Śrī, Brahmā, Rudra gods, ending with Vyāhṛti chants. Having given Dakṣiṇā, he should serve meals to Brahmins. The preceptor should manage to get the service-idol made of gold and in standing or sitting postures, and not at all in sleeping posture. In the sectors, pertaining to divinities, to seers or to the preachers, he may do it, as in earlier cases. Otherwise blemish may arise. If there is some distortion in semblance between stationary and service-idols, or in the case of proportionless workmanship, or imitation of other shrine, it may invite destruction of the King and the nation. Therefore, having removed that idol, and having performed three-night-long mega-pacificatory fire-rite, the preceptor should install God. If heavier metal happens to be used, he should do the process in the same manner. The master should arrange to make the idol either stationary or serviceable, in stone and added by paint. Otherwise, having offered oblation into fire with Viṣṇu-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava hymn, Brāhmic hymn or the hymns named Jaya, Īṅkāra, Pāramātmika etc. and then get those painted. Meanwhile, he should transfer the potency from the service-idol into the mega (stationary) idol and worship it. In case of non-availability of Kautuka idol etc., he should deposit gold and offer oblation with, Vaiṣnava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, Vāyu-sūkta and the hymns pertaining to Directional deities.

Whatever material is used for stationary idol, with the same, he should arrange to make these of retinue deities. There is no harm in making the idols of Garuḍa, Śānta, Vighneśa, Ananta, Durgā, Saravastī in stone. Yet, if he happens to make other in wrong material, then those may turn to be exorcive. In that event, he should perform fumigatory rite, with hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Sūrya, Soma, Agni, Garuḍa, Paramātmā, Jaya, Śrī, Durgā, other deities and the chants: Īṇkāra etc. and then serve Brahmins with meals.

3.Atonement for Installational defects

In the contingencies of either omission of prescribed dimension of the sacrificial pendal or its excess or misplacement of site as well as omission of ornamentation of sleeping altar, the priest has to perform Homa-rites addressed to the deities: Śrī and Bhūmi as well as the presiding deity of the region, and by recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. If the arches happen to be fashioned without prescribed measurement, then the priest should perform Homa addressed to the presiding deity of the door. If the garland made of Darbha blades is missing in the sacrificial pendal, then the priest should perform Homa by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn. If soil or sand has been fetched from unholy region for the purpose of constructing fire-pit, then the priest should offer Vaiṣṇava and Vāruṇa Homas. After constructing the fire-pit with either stone or wood or metal or lumps of clay or bricks etc., the priest should offer oblation into fire by reciting the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, five gross elements and Sun god.

If there arises defect in measurement of the fire-pit, the priest should offer oblations into fire after reciting the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Soma, Agni, and Āditya respectively. In the event of misplacement of the venue of Homa, the priest should offer fire-oblation by chanting the hymns: Vaiṣṇava, Prājāpatya, Āgneya, Vāruṇa ending with Vyāhṛtis. In the event of burning or loss or breakage of the Darbha blades meant for layer and boundary-lines, the priest should rejoin those as before and offer Homa, with mega-Vyāhṛtis and Mindāhuti. Then he should perform Homa, by chanting Āgenya and Vaiṣṇava hymns, concluding with Vyāhṛtis. In case, the priest fails to set up Sabhya kind of fire, into the fire-pit meant for permanent fire, then after executing expiation as in previous case and having fetched fire from the house of a Śrotriya i.e. adherent of Vedic rite, and then having set it up, he should offer stream of ghee as fuel and commence permanent Homa ritual. If the Vāstu-Homa has been performed by transgression of scheduled place and time, then the priest should offer fire-oblation with the hymns: Āgenya, Vāruṇa, Vaiṣṇava and Prājāpatya and end with Vyāhṛti. In case the fire meant for Vāstu is erroneously established in the east, then the priest should offer fire-oblation by chanting Aindra and Vaiṣṇava hymns and then feed hundred Brahmins. Likewise, if that fire is erraneously set up in some other directions, then the priest should offer fire-oblation by chanting the hymn addressed to the respective directional deity along with Vaiṣṇava hymn and then arrange food for Brahmins. If, by chance, either a dog or a crow enters into the sacrificial pavilion, the priest should discard that fire-pit, construct another fire-pit and offer ghee oblation into it and then offer oblations in Mūla-home hundred-fold while reciting the hymns pertaining to Agni, Viṣṇu, Pañca- Vāruṇa hymn.

If there occurs lapse of worship of the gods: Brahmā, Soma etc. at the time of sprouts offering of or if lapse occurs of offering of oblation at that time, then having offered oblation by addressing respective deities and Viṣṇu, the priest should again offer worship and oblation. If the sprout-offering lapses, the priest should fumigate alongwith chanting of Vaiṣṇava Mantras, Viṣṇu-sūkta,Puruṣa-sūkta, hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Soma, and also the Vyahṛtis and perform the rite of offering sprouts. In the case of lapse of ritual, which is posterior to sprout-offering, the priest should perform mega-pacification, by fumigation and then he should conduct the ritual after offering of sprout afresh.

At the time of construction of group of altars prior to eye-opening ceremony, in case of non-availability of gems, the priest should chant the hymns Vaiṣṇava, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and those pertaining to Brahmā and Soma and also pertaining to Vyāhṛtis and then he should offer oblation and deposit gold in ample quantity in respective places. Thereafter he should reconstruct the group of altars. However, at the time of construction of group of altars, if there is lapse of recitation of Mantras, then having fumigated the pacification, the priest should recite the Mantra while touching the altar. When the group of altars has been constructed by Śilpi alone, i.e. architect alone with simple fire ritual, then the priest should bathe the group of altars with water from pitchers, perform fumigatory mega-pacification and then recite respective chant. In case, the main idol happens to be installed on the ground, without altar, then having offered special worship to Lord, and having begged pardon alongwith salutation, the priest should invoke God into a pitcher, he should arrange to construct an altar. Thereafter, having placed God on the altar, he should purify the same with pacificatory Homa, circum-rotation fire and with penta-cow-products as well as declaration of auspicious day. Then he should conduct fresh installation-rite. He should, thereafter conduct special worship for a period of nine days, seven days, five days or three days. Then, having served meals to Brahmins, he should offer Dakṣinā to the preceptor. If by mistake, the altar of metalic-idol happens to break, then he should deposit those gems, which were earlier deposited, once again. Then, after performing ablution-rite, with water from seven pitchers, he should re-join the altar and conduct consecration, along with mega-pacification.

If there happens lapse of eye-opening rite, or if transgression of time has taken place, then the priest should initially offer oblation addressed to the presiding deities of six Maṇḍalas, along with the recitation of the chants 'yad devadi' and Īnkāra and also of the hymn pertaining to Supreme soul and Puruṣa-sūkta, and then he may execute the eye-opening rite. In case, the eye-opening rite has been performed during prohibited time, then after offering oblation along with the recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, and hymn: pertaining to the Nava-graha deities, i.e. presiding over nine planets and then he should perform eye-opening rite, afresh. The priest should perform the eye-opening rite only after getting the group of altars constructed. Otherwise, he should offer oblation for its pacification by conducting three-day long mega-pacification. At the time of eye-opening ritual, in case there is omission of the material used for displaying to the cow, then after offering oblation while reciting Godana-sūkta and also the hymns, addressed to each respective presiding deity of corresponding items and also the hymn pertaining to Viṣṇu, the priest should display each individual item thereafter. At the time of eye-opening rite, if there is omission of proper procedure or its distortion of omission of Mantras or omission of material, in respect of all these, the priest should perform pacificatory Homa and offer Dakṣiṇā. During the range of rituals, beginning with soil-testing and concluding with eye-opening whatever ritual lapse takes place for the pacification thereof, the priests should perform mega pacification Homa on that day and commence the course of action.

If there is omission of material used for ritual retention, then the priest should offer Homa to the presiding deities of respective items, while reciting Viṣṇu-sūkta and Vaiṣṇava hymn. In the case of non-availability of gems, gold in place of metals, mercury in place of food-grains, barley has to be selected. Thereafter, the priest should perform Homa by reciting pairs of Sūktas, Vaiṣṇava and Viṣṇu dikdaivatya and Vaiṣṇava as well as Vāyavya and Vaiṣṇava. If the ritual-retention in five cow products, milk and water happens to be omitted, then the priest should offer fire-oblation by chanting Vaiṣṇava and Ārsa hymns and Viṣṇu-sūkta and for either three days or one day and he should execute ritual retention in water. In the event of installation of an idol which is not subjected to ritual retention the priest should perform mega-pacificatory Homa and then install the idol after completion of proper ritual retention. If the Homa meant for ritual retention is missed, then he should perform triple Homa, pertaining to Rudra, Brahmā and Viṣṇu. At the time of praising the office of Homa priest, if inversion of Vedic sage heritage or the mention is omitted, then the priest should perform the Homas named Ārṣa, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Prājāpatya, Aindra, Roudra, Pāriṣada and Sārasvata. In case of lapse of remnant-fumigation in Sabhya fire, the priest should perform Homa by reciting hymns addressed to Viṣṇu and Agni and Vyāhṛti chants. In the event of distortion in the act of carrying sacred fire or if it is done without recitation of the mantra, the priest should perform the Homas with the hymns of Viṣṇu, Agni, Brahmā and Soma; and then carry the sacred fire. After that the priest should not pass in between those fires prior to the offering of oblation with the stream of ghee. In case, he happens to trespass he should do the atonement by performing Homa addressed to the respective guardian deity of directions, and by reciting Vaiṣṇava and Āgńeya hymns. After cooking the rice, cow-product and cream on mundane fire, he should do sacramental refinement on the respective sacred fires, by chanting relevant Mantras. In the event of distortion of fire sacrament taking place and also in the event of prohibited admixture of Mantras, he should kindle the fire and offer salutation and then recite Agni-sūkta. In case, the churned fire gets extinguished, after churning it again and having collected it, the priest should perform oblations by chanting Agni-sūkta. In case of non-availability of churned fire, the priest may procure it either from the house of preceptor or a Brahmin of Vedic heritage and then he should deposit it in the fire-pit, meant for Gārhapatya type of fire, and then having offered oblation of stream of ghee, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, goddess Bhūmi and Agni respectively.

After having maintained and augmented that fire, he should execute transferring that fire in the serial order into the fire-pits named; Āhārya, Āhavaniya, Āvasathya, Sabhya, and Paundarīka. After completion of ghee oblation the priest should place fuel in the ashes collected in the fire. Then after putting it into the Mundane fire, and putting fuel sticks, he should kindle it. After sprinkling ghee around it, he should offer oblation by reciting Vicchinna, Mindāhuti, Vaiṣṇava hymn as well as Vyāhṛtis i.e. Om bhūḥ, bhuva, suvaḥ etc. Then after adding that kindled fire on the fuel sticks, it should be taken down into Mundane fire is one view point, and the other view point is that it should be descended into the mundane fire, after imposing it in himself by the preceptor. If the implements Sruk ladle etc. are not available he should manage the oblation with Sruva ladle and by reciting Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Āgńeya, Saumya, and Āditya. In case, the prescribed fuel is not available, then he should bring the fuel of Palāsa and Aśvattha tree. Then having meditatively identifying those as each respective fuel and then he should perform expiatory Homa by chanting Āgneya, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma and Ārśa. The priest should discard Kuśa blades as well as fuels which are more than one month old. In case he uses those then he should perform expiatory Homa with Vāruṇa, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Saumya, Āgńeya, Āditya hymns. If there is deficiency in the dimension of grass mats or Paridhi sticks, ghee bowls and other utensils as well as sacrificial ladles Sruva etc., the priest should offer oblations for each Homa by reciting Mindāhuti, Sāvitrī and Vyāhṛtis. In case, he happens to put the fuel which wet or mixed with germs, thorns or grease, then after removal of each of it, the priest should put fresh fuel and kindle Homa by reciting Āgneya, Vaiṣṇava hymns and Vyāhṛtis. In the event of omission of prescribed material, the priest should sacrifice with the ghee of tawny cow while chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn. He should then offer final oblation with Vyāhṛti chants. However, if all the faults beginning with omission of prescribed material etc. occur, then the priest should execute re-installation of the image. In the case of omission of using the ingredients: wreath of Darbha blades, flowers, fuel-sticks and unbroken rice grains, the priest should offer oblation by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn and Vyāhṛtis, i.e. Om, bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ, suvaḥ. If per chance, the curds and milk of either she goat or she buffaleo happens to be utilised, then the priest should conduct fire worship by reciting Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Āgneya and Saura hymns and conclude by Vyāhṛtis. The priest should not fetch ghee of she goat or she buffaleo which is adulterated by oils of sesames etc. or that mixed with water. In case he happens to conduct fumigation with such ghee, then that rite becomes demonic rite. For the mitigation of that flaw, the priest should conduct Homa by oblation of the ghee of tawny cow, while reciting each respective chant and then having offered oblation while reciting the hymn addressed to Ṛṣis. Finally he should conduct Homa while chanting Vyāhṛti. In case germs like fly etc. or ants or lice etc. happen to fall in either the dish containing ghee or in the cooked rice, then having taken those out and then having brought another items, the priest should conduct Homa by chanting Prājāpatya, Āgneya and Vaiṣṇava hymns. In case if she goat's ghee is not available, then having removed those vicious objects, the priest should purify the food dish with Darbha blades by lifting those and then accepting that priest should perform Sviṣṭākāra Homa and should offer oblations by chanting Vyāhṛtis. Convetionally, wherever some fault takes place the Homa alongwith Vyāhṛti chant is to be conducted by way of expiation.

"There is no other Mantra equivalent to Vyāhṛtis, i.e. Om bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ, suvaḥ and there is no other oblational item equivalent to the ghee of she goat. There is no other hymn fit for muttering equivalent to Gāyatrī and there is no other god superior to Keśava, i.e. Viṣṇu."

In the event of inversion of oblation the priest should perform Homa by reciting Brāhma and Vaiṣṇava hymns. In case there is want of proporation of ingredients of fumigation the priest may conduct Homa by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn. If the material collected for Homa is touched by ineligible persons, the priest should offer oblation to the idol with seven pitchers and he should also bathe service-idol and other idols also. At the time of offering oblation into fire of fuel sticks, she goat's ghee or rice ball, if the fire burns sideways, then having performed Homa by reciting the deity presiding over the relevent directions, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting the chant pertaining to Vāyu and Vaiṣṇava hymn. In case the fire flame turns in leftward rotation, then the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Saura chant. In case fire sparks take leftward rotation or in the event of reduction of lustre or if the flame has excessive diffusion, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Brāhma and Vaiṣṇava hymns ending with Vyāhṛtis. Then he should feed Brahmins. After casting of fuel sticks, if the fire gets congregated, then the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Vāyavya and Vaiṣṇava hymns. At the time of casting of inflamable sticks, to whichsoever direction the drifting of fire takes place, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting the chants pertaining to the presiding deity of that direction.

In the case of untold expiational prescription for overall lapses in sacrificial ritual, having offered oblation with Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta, the priest should mutter the pacificatory chant with the Vedic Mantras Śan no Mitra....

and also Puruṣa-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-sūkta. All the lacunae in all the sacrifices gets completed by conducting Vaiṣṇava Homa and Vaiṣṇava chant-muttering because the Vedas have said that Viṣṇu alone is the incarnation of Yajna. In case the priest happens to proceed with the ritual of non-prescribed sacrifice, then the priest should offer oblation into fire by recitation of Ārṣa chants and seven Vyāhṛtis. When the defect occurs in the performance of worship addressed to whichever god, the priest should carry on expiation by reciting the respective chant pertaining to that particular god. In the event of ritual transgression of prescribed ritual order of all the Homa-rites or in case of its total lapse, the priest should conduct fire-oblation by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and the hymn pertaining to Agni and conclude it by reciting Vyāhṛti. In case the sacrificial implements are not available and if there occurs displacement of chants as well as ingredients, the priest should conduct Homa of Brāhma and Āgneya type. In case of distortion of the cooked rice-balls and pancakes, pacificatory Homa and food to Brahmins is to be arranged. At the time of final Homa, if there occurs some ritual omission or mistaken congregation of ritual act and ritual ingredients, then having offered final oblation into fire, the priest should recite Vaiśvanara hymn. Then he should serve meals to Brahmins. In case of non-availablity of prescribed sacrificial venue, or in case of unholy admixture of such venues, the priest should perform fire-oblation addressed to goddess earth.

If, the installation of the pitcher is conducted at night, it leads to great sin. For that, the priest should perform Homa with Saura-sūkta and also with Āgneya-sūkta and Vaiṣṇava-sūkta, separately, with eight thousand oblations each. Then he should install the pitcher only at day time. If there is some omission in the dimension of the pitcher or there occurs the blemish of wrong occasion of breaking of the pitcher, so also in absence of availability of the pair of clothes, gems and weapons, the advent of God does not take place. In that case, the priest should perform Homa by reciting Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava hymn, Muni-mantra as well as Brāhma and Āgneya hymns and also the hymn pertaining to Paramātmā and also the chants; Īṅkāra etc. and then having served meals to the Brahmins etc., the host should offer Dakṣinā to the preceptors. If, by chance, unholy symptoms, like agitation, throbbing, dozing, laziness, infatuation, noticed in the preceptors etc. who are in charge of the worship of the pitcher, greed etc., then having performed mega-pacificatory Homa and having served meals to hundred Brahmins, the host should elect some other preceptor and commence the ritual. In case, the pitcher which has been kept ready happens to break, then the priest should perform Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, as well as hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Indra, Agni and Ṛṣis and then having served meals to Brahmins he should install another pitcher. Thereafter, he should commence further course after performing Homa with one thousand oblations while reciting Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī and after arranging recitation of auspicious day and after greeting the preceptor with blessings and after giving him Dakṣinā in terms of twelve niṣka (gold coins) or its half number, i.e. six niṣkas and commence the ritual course.

In the contingency of misplacement of depositing fourteen pitchers meant for worship of the idols; Kautuka etc., then he should perform Homa by recitation of the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu and Paṅktīśa. If some reversal has taken place in respect of idols, then the priest should perform Homa by reciting Pañcavāruṇa and Vaiṣṇava hymns. In case the pitcher is touched by dogs etc. or degraded persons or untouchable creatures; he should discard that pitcher and select another one. Then he should perform Homa with recitation of the hymns; Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Saura and Āgneya as well as Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta. Then he should donate fourteen cows. In case the cloth which is used for the purpose of ritual retention, in sleeping posture is marked by pours etc., then having discarded it and having procured another one, the priest should conduct fire-fumigation, while chanting the hymn addressed to goddess Śrī(i.e.Śrī-sūkta) and the hymn addressed to Viṣṇu (Visnor nu kam etc). If for the purpose of the retention in sleeping posture, five types of bed-spread; made out of egg-born threads (i.e. silk) etc. is not available, then for each type of cloth, having contemplated upon its proxy, should be spread. The priest should then, offer sacrifice addressed to the divinities: Viṣṇu, Śrī and Bhū. In the contingency of inversion of beds meant for the idols; Kautuka etc. the priest should offer sacrifice addressed to the deities of Viṣṇu, Śrī and Bhūmi. If the sleeping place has been misplaced then he should offer oblation with the hymns pertaining to Sūrya, Vighna(hartā), Sudarśana and Viṣvaksena. In case the priest happens to lift the idol of the sleeping deity, prior to sunrise, then, by way of atonement he should offer oblation into fire, four times, while chanting Mantras pertaining to two goddesses and also Vaiṣṇava chants. Thereafter having made the deity go to sleep again, he should install the same, when the proper time arrives. Installation at night causes all blames. Therefore, having offered fire-oblation by reciting the hymns: Āgneya, Vaiṣṇava and Saura and then he should install the deity only during daytime. The preceptor who is endowed with virtues, should re-install the idol which has been established by a preceptor or the architectural preceptors who lack the prescribed qualification. Then he should conduct mega-pacificatory fumigation, for three days and nights. If the priest happens to conduct installation, on the occasion of non-prescribed lunar fortnights, constellations and zodiacs, he should conduct re-installation after conducting one day mega-pacificatory Homa. In case the installation has been hastened by the persons aspiring for same status, without executing soil-testing etc. or without election of a preceptor, or if the priest happens to do the installation on prescribed constellation or month, then the priest should conduct mega pacificatory Homa thrice a day, for a month or a fortnight or for a week or for five days or for three days. Then he should mutter each respective chant. Thereafter, having carried out soil-testing, he should conduct installation (of the deity) afresh.

Misplacement of the venue for installation of the idol incurs blame. In the sanctum, the central place pertains to Brahmā. Thereafter the surrounding row pertains to gods. There- beyond, the periphery belongs to human beings and the fourth periphery adjacent to the wall (surrounding) belongs to goblins. If the idol is installed in the locus of Brahmā, then it leads to the ruin of Brahmins as well as Kṣatriyas. God would not relish the residence in human periphery and the dwelling of the deity in the area of goblins leads to over all ruin. As a result, the idol of standing posture as well as riding (on a vehicle) is to be established in the periphery pertaining the locus of gods and slightly extending to human periphery. The seated idol should be located in Daivika periphery slightly resorting to Manuṣa area. The reclining idol is to be installed primarily occupying human periphery and slightly extending to the area of gods. The priest should install the deity having straight eye-line and having gentle glance. In case, he happens to displace the posture, then he should perform pacification. Then having offered oblation into fire while chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn and the Mantras, Īṅkāra etc. and then serve food to the Brahmins. The Śilpī should construct respectively appropriate altar, for the stationary and the service-idol, as per prescription. If it is improperly done, then he should perform Homa, pertaining to that deity as well as the deities inside the temple and then feed Brahmins. After the installation of the stationary idol and prior to the mega-installation, for the pacification of all untold flaws, the priest should offer oblation into fire with the ghee of the tawny cow while reciting the hymns: Vaiṣṇava, Viṣṇu-sūkta and those pertaining to the goddesses - Śrī and Bhūmi and ending with Vyāhṛtis. In the event of ruin of same dwelling in village etc., the priest should offer one hundred and eight oblations into fire by reciting the chant - Bhūtā...... In case delay is caused at the time of installation of idol, then he should perform mega pacificatory Homa and feed the Brahmins. At the time of installation if the order gets deranged, then the priest should perform Saura Homa for pacification. At the time of installation if ill omens like weeping, oozing of blood or collapse or death of someone or entry of a low born person takes palce, then having conducted mega pacificatory Homa, the host should serve food to Brahmins. The priest should conduct the invocation of the deity from the stationary idol into the idols: service etc. as in the case of lighting one lamp from other. In case the invocation is done with water from the pitcher, out of ignorance, then having instanlty conducted ablution with pure water while chanting the hymn iṣetvā ūrje tvā, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puraṣa-sūkta and invoke the presence of the deity form stationary idol into service idol. the presence of the deity, in the service- idol, inversion (of invocation) incurs blame.

In whatever form the sculptor makes the stationary idol, in the same form he should fashion the service idol. For standing (stationary idol), he should make standing (service-idol) and for seated one, either standing or seated. For reclining, he should make seated or standing. He should not at all make sleeping service-idol. In case it is done in distorted form, then the priest should offer oblation into fire, addressing thirtythree attendant deities, then after performing Homa by recitation of the hymns pertaining to Vighna, Sūrya, Garuḍa and five gross elements as well as Durgā-sūkta, Śrī-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. Then having served food to Brahmins, the priest should urge them to recite auspicious day declaration. Thereafter, having arranged to fashion the service-idol the priest should install the same. In the event of loss of the stationary idol, the priest should arrange to make another replica bearing same characteristics and install it.

And then, the priest should install another idol, in the event of cracking of the idol, the priest should perform mega-pacification. In case, the installed idol happens to be displaced, by fault, re-installation has to be done. In the event of shaking of the stationery idol, the priest should perform mega-pacificatory rite, by fire-oblations. Then having served food to hundred Brahmins and having donated gold as well as cow, fresh installation and consecration is to be performed. When same idol is installed by priests, ignorant of proper procedure, the priests should remove that immediately and freshly install the same, at the hands of expert priests. In the eventuality of the idol installed by experts, being displaced, the priests should install the same, afresh after performing pacificatory Homa-rite. In case, the temple super structure and also the stationary idol is displaced due to storm etc. the preceptor should arrange to construct a new temple either in the same place or in the vicinity, in nearby village, of about hundred Daṇḍas, i.e. two hundred meters away on some other spacious site and install the deity therein, in the intermediate period till the completion of new temple, the priest should worship that image, in some other shrine.

If a stationary idol or the service-idol which is installed in some temple, by his ignorance installed in some other temple, then after performance of mega-pacificatory fire-fumigation, and after feeding of Brahmins, the priest may install the same, in its earlier appropriate place, after proper rituals. Whatever stone-idol has been brought from other temple, should be covered under ground, and the priest should install another idol and then he should perform mega-pacification for one week. In the event of lapse of sacrament for over one month in the respect of the mega idol, which is consecrated, the priest should offer oblation alongwith recitation of Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta as well as the hymns pertaining to the deities; Śrī and Bhūmi as well as those pertaining to Brahmā, Rudra, and retinue deities. The priest should increase the quantum of atonement as follows: In the event of lapse of two months, double and the lapse of three months, triple and in the same progression, upto the end of one year. After the lapse of one year, the priest should reconsecrate the idol. In the event of lapse of twelve years, he should conduct the sacrament beginning with ploughing of the land, and other rites for the temple and entire ritual course; collection of stone-peg etc., and perform fresh installation; consecration. In case there is deformity of body in the consecrated mega-idol, then having discarded that idol, the priest should perform pacificatory rite. If by ignorance, a disproportionate icon is installed in a disporporatonate shrine, then the priest should perform mega pacificatory rite.

When the idol is uprooted by miscreants like men, bulls or elephants etc., if that idol is intact without loss of limbs, then, having performed ritual retention in water, i.e. acquatic retention, he should re-install it, after proper inset of jewels. In case, some limb is wanting, then he should dig a pit in the ground and put that image in it and cover it. If even the festival idol falls down, the priest should conduct mega-pacification and mega-ablution. He should then, offer oblation into fire with lotus leaves, while chanting Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī hymn. At the time of installation if there occurs vision of great earthquake or some other bad omen, or if there is laspe of ritual involving profuse material, then re-installation is to be conducted. Therein, the rites of eye opening, ritual retension and depositing of gems etc. need not be done. In case, there is inversion or lapse of invocation of assembly-gods, recitation of juṣṭa kāra, svāhākāra worship, priest should fumigate with recitation of Vaiṣṇava Viṣṇu-sūkta and also Brāhma and Raudra hymns. Thereafter, he should conduct Homa by chanting respective mantars ending with Vyāhṛti. In the event of the image being contaminated by untouchable creatures, should conduct ablution and perform expiatory ritual as in case of pitcher being touched by untouchable creatures. Thereafter, having conducted such rituals as sprinkling of penta-cow-products, mega-sprinkling and mega-pacification, he should conduct auspicious-day-declaration. Host should feed the Brahmins. In the event of laspe of study, the priest should perform Sārasvata Homa. In the event of lapse of adoration of assembly gods and also dance and music, then the Homa with respective mantras is to be conducted. In case, the time for offering Dakṣīnā to preceptor and others is lapsed, then the host may offer Dakṣīnā after performing Homa with hundred and eight abulation while chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn and Muni mantra. It is a convention that the sacrificial ritual with petty Dakṣīṇā kills the host. And the sacrifice performed with ample Dakṣīṇā as per prescription gives unlimited fruit. In the event of lapse of serving food to Brahmins, the host may conduct mega-pacification for three days.

In case the material collected for God, inside the sacrificial pendal or the pavilion, catches fire, then he should perform Homa with recitation of Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Soura and Āgneya hymns. Conventionally, the principal icons are those which are made of gold, silver, copper, stone or wood. In case some other inferior icon is installed by ignoring the aforesaid icons, earlier installed, then that icon becomes exorcive. For that, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Viṣṇu-sūkta, Śrī-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, Brāhma-sūkta, Raudra-sūkta, Viṣvajit-sūkta and mega-Vyāhṛtis. Then he should install the previous idol, after procuring it. In respect of installation of penta-Murtis, the priest should conduct all separate rituals of ablution etc. for each one, otherwise he should offer one thousand oblations into separate fires with separate respective mantras. In the eventualities such as inversion of rituals, inversion idols, inversion of mantras and such flaws, it is necessary to conduct Homa alongwith recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Minḍahuti, and the chants: nārāyaṇāya vidmahe, Śan no mitraḥ, Viṣṇor nu kam etc. at the conclusion of Homa, the priest should mutter Vaiśvanara hymn, for universal peace. For the sake of overall prosperity of all ritual, the priest should meditate upon Lord Vaiśvanara. In fact, Lord Purushottama is Himself the Lord of Yajña and is to be adored by all rituals. If He is pleased, He will bestow the fruit of all ritual. For the sake of expiation, of all flaws, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, hymns: Śrī and Bhū as well as Soura and Āgneya. In case of pacification of all the flaws comitted during the ritual beginning with ploughing and ending with consecreation, the priest should conduct Homa by reciting Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, yad devādi, Pāramāmika, Īṅkāra, Prājāpatya, Indra, Āgneya, Saura, Somya and Vaiṣṇava hymns followed by mega-Vyāhṛtis. Thereafter the host should feed the Brahmins and offer the Daksiṇā to the preceptor. Then he should arrange declaration of auspicious day. In the eventuality of touch of fire, anywhere inside the temple-premises or in the event of impact of lightning or damage by storm, the priest should perform fire-oblations along with the recitation of Īṅkāra addressed to Supreme Lord. And also the oblation called special oblation called Vicchinna, Mindāhuti and chants addressed to Fire, as well as Vyāhrits: and then, he should conduct consecration after renovation. In case, without the performance of ritual installation of lakes etc. the water thereof is put to use, then for the sake of expiation, the priest should conduct mega-pacificatory fire-oblation and thereafter conduct-ritual installation thereof.

4. Expiation for defects in Routine-worship

In the event of lapse of cleaning the premises, the priest should perform Vaiṣṇava, Varuṇa and Śanta Homa. In the event of lapse of cleaning the leftover of offering, the priest should perform Vaiṣṇava, Viṣvaksena and Varuṇa Homa. In case the sprinkling and annointing service is omitted, then he should fumigate by reciting Vāyavya and Bhū-sūktas. In case sweeping the temple with broom is done at mid-night, then Homa with Śrī-sūkta is to be conducted.

In case the priest and others happen to skip bath, then the chief priest should mutter Agha-marṣaṇa-sūkta for eight hundred times and offer oblations to fire with Muni-mantra and Gāyatrī and having himself taken fresh bath, he should resume routine worship. In case vertical forehead mark is skipped, he should mutter the chant pertaining to five gross elements. In case there occurs omission of rightward circum-ambulation or omission of salutation to the retinue-deities, Vaiṣṇava type of Homa is to be performed.

By mistake if the priest happens to take rightward ambulation, round the temple, in add numbers(1,3,5....) of times, he should mutter the hymns: Pauruṣa and Vaiṣṇava. As a rule, he should take circumambulation, in even number only (2,4,6...) otherwise the merit which is previously earned may also be lost. The devotee should not salute the God by standing in the sub-directions: south-east, south-west and north-west. In case, it is done so, the errant should mutter Puruṣa-sūkta beginning with the mantra: sahasra śirṣā....etc.

Vimāna i.e. temple-structure is regarded as Viṣṇu incarnate. One should not step over it by feet etc. At the time of rightward circumambulation around it, one should offer salutation thereto. In case, one happens to trespass the super structure or enclosure or the shrine, by mistake, one should exercise hundred time breath-regulation. In case, the priest fails to open the temple-door, in the morning before sun-rise, at noon and in the evening before sun-set, then having quickly opened the door and having paid salutation, for the atonement, the priest should perform Homa with Vaiṣṇava, Saura hymns as well as those pertaining to the deities presiding over the door as well as Śrī and Bhū hymns.

Even in the event of opening of door without chanting Mantras, the priest should conduct the same Homa-rites. In failure of door-opening, the priest should perform Homa-rite with Kavāta-mantra i.e. chant pertaining to door and Rudra-mantra. If the priest fails to do salutation to God and clapping with hands, he should perform Vaiṣṇava Homa. in case of lapse of cleansing of utensils, the priest should mutter Ravi-mantra. In case, adorational paraphernalia: water, flowers etc. is fetched without chant-muttering, then the priest should mutter the same two times. If the same if fetched by person belonging to other sūtra (of hereditary lineage), then he should mutter it thrice. In the case of non-availability of Brahmins, the priest may arrange to procure the worship-items, at the hands of members of Kṣatriya and other social orders, who have their arms branded with Śaṅkha and Cakra i.e. conch and disc, and who have cut their nails and hair and cleansed teeth and nails at time-schedule and who have worne washed clothes. If the priest happens to commence worship without adoration of deities, presiding over the worship-materials, then he should offer oblations to fire, by reciting the chants pertaining to the gods presiding over those items and to Viṣṇu and Vyāhṛtis i.e. Om Bhūḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ.

In the event of memorizing of the seer, the metre and deity

(of the Mantra) one should offer oblation with Muni-mantra, and omni-deity and Brāhma hymns. If the priest is ignorant of the components of Mantra such as Ṛsi, metre and deity, then in normal course, he should memorise the phrase- the seer is the indweller, Anuṣṭubh is the metre and deity is Supreme self-and worship God. In case, he fails to perform declaration of auspicious day and sprinkling with five cow-products, then he should fumigate with Vāruṇa and Raudra hymns and do the sprinkling rite. In the event of lapse of placing connectivity-brush, he should recite Vaiṣṇava hymn and Muni-mantra, and offer oblation and then place the grass-brush. Stepping over of the brush is not to be committed until worship of concluding time is not over. In case, it happens to be committed, then, having offered Brāhma and Vaiṣṇava and Raudra Homas, the priest should offer that worship to God. When the ablution of the deity has lapsed, having offered oblation to fire while chanting Vaiṣṇava and Vāruṇa hymns, the priest should bathe the deity, with the Vedic chants: Āpo hi ṣṭthā - etc. If he is unable to administer bath to the deity, he may sprinkle the idol with Kuśa-blended water-dips, while chanting Mantras, and then having removed old clothes, he should offer new set of washed clothes. Some people suggest optional course of executing ablution on five Vaiṣṇavite days, if daily ablution is not possible to be performed.

The priest should do the setting of flowers, after clearing the flowers, previously placed on the altar of stationary idol. In case setting of flowers is done for daily worship of Kautuka i.e. service-idol, without doing it on the stationary idol, then, having performed Homa with Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and also Viṣṇu-gāyatrī, the priest should do the setting of flowers (to stationary idol) at that time only. If the adoration of the retinue-deities Dhātṛ and others, happens to be omitted, then having performed Homa to those deities and to Viṣṇu, he should subsequently worship the retinue-members. If the priest fails to worship the companion-seers and gods: Mārkaṇḍeya and Bhṛgu, Brahmā and Śaṅkara, then he should conduct Homa with respective relevant chants.

If the idol gets touched by someone else than the priest, then ablution is to be conducted with pure-water courses. If the idol gets touched by Brahmins eating food or those in pollution-period, then expiation is to be made as in case of touching by Śūdra. In case, the idol is touched by Kṣatriya, ablution with water from seven pitchers has to be done; and in the case of touch by Vaiśyas with water from twenty four pitchers and in the case of touch by Śūdra, he should do ablution with water from hundred and eight pitchers followed by pacificatory Homa and Brahmin-feast. In case of touch by obverse hybrid-born person, the atonement is on par with Śūdra-pollution and in case of touch by reverse-hybrid-born person, the priest should enact retention in water and other material and conduct week-long mega-pacificatory Homa and should perform re-consecration.

In the case of touch by a Tantra-practitioner, the same expiation as prescribed for the touch by reverse-hybrid-born person has to be conducted. The Tāntric sects are those which have no lineage in Vedas and those which indulge in vitiation of Vedas.

Unmāntric worship becomes exorcive. For the rectification of the blemish arising thereof, having performed fumigation pertaining to the hymns of Brahmā and Viṣṇu as well as Puruṣa-sūkta and Ekākṣara-sūkta and having invited a specialist in the lore, the priest should conduct the worship. It is so on the basis of the maxim:

'As a man frequently trembles at the sight of a snake, likewise Lord Viṣṇu is scared of a priest ignorant of Mantras.'

In case of faltering in chanting Mantras, the priest should conduct worship with the Mūrti-mantra ritual beginning with Om and ending with namaḥ i.e. salutation. Then he should mutter the eight-syllabled chant one hundred and eight times and seek pardon from God.

In the emergency of non-availability of the ritual items like incense, lamp etc. having memorised each respective item, he should fulfill worship with either flowers or besil leaves or with unbroken rice-grains yet with chant muttering. If flowers are not available too then he may manage with water alone yet accompanied by mantra-recitation. In case, there is some derangement of seat-offering etc. he should perform Homa with Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī. Or he may mutter the chants pertaining to each respective god or to Viṣṇu. If there occurs confusion in the sequence of the Omni-god ritual course, the priest should conduct Homa, with Mantras pertaining to each particular deity as well as Viṣṇu-sūkta and Vaiṣṇava hymn. Then he should arrange recital of auspicious day and having prayed god as " kindly pardon" and again adore.

In the contingent happening of displacement of seven Māntric Āsana ritual beginning with Vāhana and Āsana, the priest should mutter Vaiṣṇava hymn (viṣṇor nu kam) and Viṣṇu-sūkta (ato devā..). In respect of the inverse setting of twelve ritual courses, pertaining to ablutional course, beginning with cleansing of the tip of the tongue, the priest should perform Homa by chanting the hymns of Vāyu, Varuṇa, Soma, Sūrya and Viṣṇu. If unapproved admixture of scared thread, upper garment, unbroken rice, sandal-paste and scared garland takes place, he should offer sacrifice with the hymns of Durgā, Sarasvatī and Puruṣa. If some jumbling occurs in respect of ritual offering of ten presents: foot wears, chowrie and other ornamental items, then the priest should conduct Homa-rite with recitation of Śrī and Bhū sūktas, as well as the hymns of Garuḍa, Ṣaṇ-mukha and Rudra. The serial order in respect of services of flowers, sandal-paste, incense-fume and lamp-waiving is to be preferred as per one's taste. There is no harm in mutual encroachment among these courses. However, in respect of the six courses display of mirror, application of collurium and offering of clothes and reverential water, and eulogy, the priest should perform Homa by reciting the chants pertaining to five gross elements and the sages. In the event of inversion of the order of serving parasol, chowrie, dance and songs, the priest should offer Homa while reciting the hymns of Rudra, Brahmā, Bhū and Viṣṇu. At the time of offering of food-service, the priest should serve Honey-treat before offering food-dish. If its order is reversed, then, he should offer oblations to fire by reciting the Ṛk "Agni mile" as well as the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, Vaiṣṇavas, Brahmā and Rudra. Prior to the presentation of food-offering, he should serve all eatable items and then uncooked ones. In case of inversion thereof, the priest should offer Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava and Garuḍa hymns as well as Īṅkāra and similar chants.

In case, both the types ablution-idol and festive-idol are unavailable, then having placed the brush and gold (coin), and then having invoked God in those, the priest should offer worship. If water for washing is not available and if perfume or sandal-paste is not available, then he should sacrifice with Varuṇa and Garuḍa hymns. At the time of adoration of Śānta, if greeting and appeasing is skipped, the priest should offer Viṣvaksena-Homa, after reciting Viṣṇu-gāyatrī. If morning-invocation of god is omitted, he should offer oblation with recitation of Garuḍa hymn and Śrī-sūkta. For omission of invocation to twin-goddesses, the priest should perform Homa with chants pertaining to Śrī, Bhū, Durgā and Sarasvatī. In case of omission of meditation during worship, he should perform Viṣṇu-sūkta-Homa.

For atoning omission of service of offering Māntric-treat, the priest should do Homa-rite, by chanting Bhautika and Garuḍa hymns and Viṣṇu-gāyatrī and Vaiṣṇava hymn. For lapse of presentation of footwear, he should conduct Vaiṣṇava Homa. For lapse of ablutional ritual course, Viṣṇu-gāyatrī Homa may be done. In the omission of lustration, Raudra and Vaiṣṇava Homas are to be conducted. For lapse of washing of the blotting napkin, as well as omission of Abhyukṣaṇa (water-sprinkle), Aindra and Āgenya chant-muttering should be performed. For lapse of offering of clothes, ornaments, sacred thread and flowers, the priest should perform Homa with Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-sūkta; and for omission of ointment of sandal-paste, with Śrī-mantra. For omission of sounding the bell the expiation prescribed for omission of beating the Bherī-drum is identical. In the case of omission of serving incense fumigation and waiving of lamp, the priest may execute fire-oblation, by chanting Mantras of Śrī, Rudra and Soma hymns. For lapse of Stomāropaṇa-rite, the priest should perform Homa with Vaiṣṇava hymn and Muni-mantra and for lapse of guarding twilight rite, with Cakra-mantra. For lapse of parasol and peacock-feather-service, etc,. he should offer oblation, with hymn pertaining to five gross elements. In the case of omission of dance and song event, Jaya and similar other chants are to be uttered. In the event of failing to erect the main pendal, or decoration thereover, as also lack of oblational utensils, the priest should perform the Homa-rite with Mantras pertaining to each individual deity.

For failure of kindling evening lamp, he should offer oblation to sacred fire, by reciting hymns pertaining to the deities: Śrī, Viṣṇu and Agni. At the time of worship, if the incessant lamp gets extinguished, then after lighting the lamp with double quantity of oil, he should perform Saura, Raudra, Āgneya and Vaiṣṇava Homas. In the incident of extinction incessant lamp at time other than that of worship, having offered oblation into fire by chanting of Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī and Vaiṣṇava and Āgneya hymns, he should lit the lamp with double fuel. Conventionally, all other lamps are to be lit from the incessant lamp. Therefore, in the event of its extinction, the priest should conduct Homa with the help of Vaiṣṇava hymn and Viṣṇu-sūkta. In the contingency of extinction of all the lamps during the continuation worship of God, having bathed the God, with pure water, and having showered with Kuśa-blended water, the priest should execute pacificatory Homa, as in the case of extinction of incessant lamp, and after offering of food-oblation, the priest-should present Dakṣinā to the preceptor. When there are several lamps burning, there is no harm if one out of those extinguishes.

If the priest fails to pull curtain at the time of worship, he should offer fire-oblation after reciting the hymn pertaining to Prajāpati, Vaiṣṇava hymn, hymn pertaining to deities presiding over the door, and the Vyāhṛti chants. Then having bathed and worshipped God, he should give food-offering. At the sight of persons who abuse Vedas, who are heretics and infected by mal-diseases, and other degraded persons, the priest should offer oblations with the hymns of Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Rudra and Agni ending with Vyāhṛtis and then offer worship. The priest should avoid the glance of the corpse-burners, heretics, teacher-abusers, characterless as well as eunuchs and also having deficient limbs or excessive limbs, and also of those who profess pseudo-Buddhist sect. He should oust them out of premises and then commence worship afresh.

In the event of omission of routine daily Homa, the priest should offer oblations by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and Mindāhuti. If the permanent Homa is affected by lapse for one ṭime, then the priest should perform it two times. If the omission takes place for three days, then after churning the fire the series of Homas by recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta have to be performed. If by mistake, the Homa addressed to the image is offered in skull, then the priest should offer proper oblations by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn and Vyāhṛti Mantras. If Murti-Homa is omitted, then the priest should utter Murti mantra along with Vaiṣṇava hymn and offer oblations, in double number. If there is omission of Muni-Homa or time for it is either lapsed or reverted or has intruded with some other time, then the priest should first offer oblations with Vaiṣṇava-hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, hymn pertaining to goddess, Śrī, Brahmā, Rudra and Vyāhṛti Mantras and then with Muni-mantra. When the fire kindled for daily routine worship extinguishes having heaped the ash on the fuel and having put in its place the churned fire or mundane fire, and then putting that fuel in it, he should kindle it and sprinkle around. Then he should perform Homa, with Mindāhuti, Vicchinna, Vaiṣṇava hymn and Vyāhṛti-Mantras.

For lapse of food-offering to God, the priest should offer oblation into fire while reciting Śrī and Bhū sūktas, Brāhma, Prājāpatya and Vaiṣṇava hymns as well as Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta and then offer food in double quantum. If cooked food is not available, the priest may offer Āma. The priest may offer oblation of cooked rice, into fire by chanting the Mantra of the presiding deity. In case, the cooked food-oblation happens to be offered, bit by bit, the priest should offer oblation with recitation of the hymns: Vaiṣṇava, Śrī and Bhū as well as Brahmā and then having cooked food, he should offer in profuse quantity. If even per chance, the priest happens to offer food cooked quite prior to the time of eclipse, out of inadvertence, the whole world is afflicted by mental and physical diseases, and other troubles. Hence, having conducted fire-rite by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, as also the chants pertaining to planets, the priest should bathe the deity, offer worship and then serve food-offering. For the omission of condiments, curds and ghee in food-offering, the priest should perform Homa-rite, by chanting the hymns pertaining to Soma, Viṣṇu as well as the beginning Mantras of Yajurveda and Sāmaveda, and then he should mutter the first Mantra of Ṛgveda i.e. Agni mīle.. In case, the priest happens to offer food which is uncooked, cold, stale, deformed, vitiated by alien glance or unsprinkled by holy water, he should conduct Homa-rite by reciting hymns pertaining to the following deities: Viṣṇu, Śrī, Bhūmi, Agni, Varuṇa and Vāyu.

In the event of the food-oblation being served which is touched by obverse cross bred persons, the priest should arrange special ablution for the deity with water from forty-eight pitchers and having performed mega-pacificatory Homa-rite, he should serve profuse food-offering. The priest should not at all offer food-oblation which gets contaminated by the glance of reverse-cross bred persons, heretics, morally degraded persons, abuser of Vedas, non-believers in god, or of dogs and crows and throw it into water. Then, having performed Homa with Viṣṇu-sūkta and Vyāhṛtīs, alone, he should offer other food-oblation to God. Per chance, having offered food touched by Brahmins other than the appointed cook, he should perform a single Homa-rite. If the priest happens to serve food-offering which is contaminated by Brahmins engaged in food-eating or who are impure, such Kṣtriyas or Vaiśyas, he should bathe the King of gods, with pure water. Then having offered oblation into fire with Vaiṣṇava hymn, for ten times, he should offer other food-oblation. If he offers food-oblation touched by reverse cross breeds, he should perform ablution to deity with water from fortyeight pitchers and also mega-pacificatory Homa and then he should serve profuse food-offering.

In the contingency of offering of food-oblation containing chaff, hair, nail, bones or flies, and other insects as well as fish etc. for absolving that blemist, the priest should conduct Homa-rite with the chants: Īṅkāra etc., and hymns pertaining to all gods, Viṣṇu, Śrī and Bhūmi, and worship sovereign God by ablution with pure water. Then, he should serve Brahmins with meals. In case, the priest happens to notice fly etc., in the mega-food-oblation, then he should separate and remove the food sufficient for one person, and sprinkle the rest with water blended with sacred ash, by Kuśa-blade while chanting the hymns: Āpo hiraṇya and Pavamāna and then offer to God. If food-oblation happens to be served to persons who have despised conduct in respect of social code, the preceptor should conduct pacificatory Homa, and ablution of the deity with water from seven pitchers and then himself practise the vow named Kṛcchra involving self-hardship.

During the continuation of worship, offering of holy water and graceful food is not permitted. In its violation, the priest should perform pacificatory Homa. By offering of betel containing dirt or hair, or contamination by insects, it is obligatory to perform Homa by reciting the hymns pertaining to deities; Vaiṣṇava, Śrī and Bhūmi. For failing to offer mouth-fragrance, the priest should perform Homa by chanting Śrī mantra and Vaiṣṇava hymn.

When water and flowers meant for worship have been added with sacrament, if those are touched by any one else than approved Brahmin, the priest should discard those and fetch another set. Alternatively, after sprinkling and placing it in other vessel, he should conduct Māntric sacrament and offer worship with the same. If the items are touched by Brahmins, with unwashed hands and who are impure, while chewing eatables, then discarding that, the priest should fetch other ones. If it is touched or glanced by reverse cross breeds, should be disposed off. If the items like curds, milk, honey or water are touched by degraded persons or impure persons, or by a woman in menses, should not be admitted for service of God. One should not take the material glanced by a delivered woman. Per chance, if it is offered to God inadvertently, then, the priest should bathe the deity with pure water and having performed pacificatory Homa, he should offer worship. Same way, even flowers and fruits are also to be discarded. Out of greed, if he does not discard, then after having performed Śānti-Homa, he should do the sprinkling-rite. Then, after offering eight hundred oblations into fire, with Vaiṣṇava hymn, the priest should bathe the deity with water from seven pitchers and then serve profuse food-offering. In the event of lapse of quantum-proportion of the ingredients of food oblation meant for prey-offering, the priest should conduct fire oblation while reciting Vaiṣṇava and Prājāpatya hymns. In the case of non-availability of the food-oblation for prey, the priest may offer prey with reverential water or flower. Then he should conduct Homa with recitation of Saura and Vaiṣṇava hymns. At the time of food prey, if prey-rotation is carried out without invocation, then the prey-rotation is to be conducted again after completion of fire-oblations, by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta, as well as the hymns pertaining to the deities Śrī and Bhūmi. If the food oblation happens to fall on the ground, or if it is split apart or if it is worne out, then the priest should procure prey-food as in previous case, he should perform Homa with Vaiṣṇava, Garuḍa and Prājāpatya hymns, the priest should conduct the rightward prey-rotation. In case, the bearer of the prey-oblation (container) falls down Garuḍa, the priest should offer oblation while chanting the hymns addressed to Varuṇa, Vāyu, and the deity presiding over the prey and ending with Bhuḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ. In the event of the oblation being touched by a woman, a low-born person or a cross-bred or a crow etc., the priest should throw the food-oblation into water and carry out fire-oblation by recitation of the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Sun, Garuḍa, Soma, Fire-god, Śrī and Bhūmi, as well as Vaiṣṇava chants. Thereafter, having procured food oblation as in previous case, the priest should adore the gods presiding over prey-oblation. In case, the food oblation is vitiated by hair, insects etc. having abandoned that and having offered oblation with ghee while reciting the hymns pertaining to Sun, Moon,

Fire-God, Garuḍa. Viṣṇu and Seers, and ending with Vyāhṛtis, he should freshly commence the prey-offering.

If the prescribed prey-vessel is not available, then, he should select the oblational vessel and contemplate the form of Bali-vessel on the Haviḥ-vessel and also on the deity presiding over it, he should offer oblation with Vaiṣṇava chants and then lift the prey. In the eventuality of the substitute vessel being a lesser container, the priest should supplement it by the expiatory rite of offering oblation into fire by recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn, Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Pāramātmika hymn, the chants Īnkāra etc. and also the hymn; Brāhma, Raudra, Saura, Āgneya, Pañca-vāruṇa and also Jaya etc. Yaddevadi and Kuṣmānda oblation. In the event of the remnant of the surplus portion of food oblation remaining unoffered to Śānta, as prey, the priest should conduct fire oblation with Vaiṣṇava and Mūrti-Mantras and then offer food oblation followed by mouth fragrance to Viṣvaksena and then lift the prey-oblation once again.

In spite of the knowledge of the death of some person, if the priest happens to proceed with circum-ambulation carrying the Bali-vessel, then he has to offer fire-oblation by chanting Śānti and Dvija Mantras followed by declaration of auspicious day and sprinkling of penta-cow-products, he should freshly offer prey-oblations to spirits. Thereafter he should adore the god presiding over the flag. If the priest happens to consume feet-washing water of Lord Hari and also the sacred apportionment of the food-offering by committing omission of prey offering, then he has to repeat the worship twice. In the event of omission of morning prey-offering the priest has to conduct Homa by reciting Saura, Vaiṣṇava, Saumya and Prājāpatya hymns and repeat the ritual of worship twice at mid-day. Then he should serve ablution to god with water from seven pitchers. If however, Bali offering is lapsed even at mid-day, then he should do it three times in the evening.

If the prey-offering happens to be totally skipped over, for one full day, then the priest should conduct fire-oblation by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Purusa-sūkta and chants pertaining to the deities presiding over eight directions, and also hymn pertaining to sun, moon, and Garuḍa. Then he should serve ablution to the gods with water from seven pitchers. In the event of lapse of prey-offering for one week the priest should conduct water sprinkling followed by serving food to Brahmins. Then he should conduct fresh festive prey-offering. Thereafter, having offered oblations to the spirits dwelling inside the temple premises by chanting respective individual Mantras pertaining to them and then commence pacificatory rite afresh. After a lapse of twelve continuous days, the priest should perform mega-pacificatory Homa and then bathe the Lord of gods. In the event of fortnight long lapse of prey-offering, the priest has to serve ablution to the Lord, after sprout offering install a water pitcher and then conduct sprinkling ritual after fire oblation with Vaiṣṇava and omni-God hymns. In the event of month-long lapse of prey-offering the priest has to conduct fire oblations by chanting Vaiṣṇava, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta, hymns pertaining to Śrī and Bhumi goddesses, hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Rudra and directional deities and the chants Pāramātmika, Īnkāra etc. Then after serving to gods with water from seven pitchers and offering Him ablution and mega food-oblation and the priest should the prey-oblation vessel. In case, there happens trimonadic lapse of prey-offering, the priest should begin with showing of sprouting seeds and then having conducted mega-pacificatory Homa, for three nights, he should conduct sprinkling rite. Thereafter, having carried out expiatory Homa, he should assess the quantum of the prey-offering, during the days of non-offering of prey and he should collect that much amount of prey-oblation and cast over the platform, assigned for prey-offering. In the contingency even of an year long lapse of prey-offering, the priest has to conduct mega-pacificatory Homa for five days and then ablution is to be conducted with water, taken from one hundred and eight pitchers. Then, he should gather prey-oblation in profuse quantity of food having lost any measurement. Finally, he should prostrate before the Lord of gods beseeching 'Lord, kindly forgive me'.

If other items, which form part of worship, get vitiated in the same manner, or lost, then having offered oblation into fire addressing each respective presiding deity, alongwith Viṣṇu, he should freshly worship with other objects. In absence of availability of those, he should elect flower and water, as the representative of those, notionally, and memorizing each one item, he should worship the Lord.

The priest should, not at all, worship the Lord of gods either with vehicles, parasol, chowrie etc,. or clothes, ornaments or flower meant for other cruel divinities; lest he should perform ablution.

At the time of worship, if deformity of limbs, crack in colour or fire-burns are noticed, then the priest should immediately arrange for pacificatory rite. Then after offering ghee-pour into fire, preceded by Vāstu-Homa and rotation of fire, he should offer oblations with Bilva-leaves soaked in ghee or with lotuses, while reciting Pāramātmika hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta. Then he should offer one hundred and eight oblations, while thrice rotating the chanting of Murti-Mantras. At the completion of the ritual of worship, if someone other than the priest, happens to receive holy water or Prasāda i.e. apportioned eatable offered to God, then that worship becomes fruitless. Hence, after performing mega-pacificatory rite, he should repeat the ritual of worship.

In the contingency of not closing the temple-door at scheduled time or its untimely opening, the priest should perform Homa-rite, for the sake of its atonement, by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and the hymn pertaining to the presiding deities of the twilight periods. Indeed to conduct worship of God, in ideal ritual code is not possible even to Brahmā etc. What would be the capacity, then of human beings whose minds are affected by instability!. In the case of single lapse of taking rightward circumambulation for prey-oblation-ritual, or in case of inadvertent excessive circumambulation, he should offer oblation into fire while reciting the hymns, Vaiṣṇava, Garuḍa and Saura and then he should carry out one more rotation. In the contingency of some obstacle taking place during the prey-rotation, the priest should offer oblations into fire while chanting the hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Soma, Sūrya, Viṣṇu, Garuḍa and Viṣvaksena, the priest should re-commence the prey-rotation. At the time of prey-rotation, if the equipment like parasol is not available, then by chanting Vāruṇa hymns. If chowires etc. are not available, then by chanting Vāyavya hymn. If lamp is not available then by reciting Āgneya and Vaiṣṇava hymn, if musical instruments are not available then by reciting Puruṣa-sūkta and in absence of availability of dance and songs by reciting Viṣṇu-sūkta, the priest should conduct fire-oblations, undertake prey-rotation in the resonance of sound of bells. At that time, he should recite Śākuna-sūkta as well as Svasti-sūkta.

If the performance of omni-flaw-atonement is undertaken at the month-end, then, it should be either on twelfth lunar date or on the rise of Śravaṇa constellation. Prior to that date, sprout offering needs to be conducted. For that sake, on the previous night, he should offer special worship to the Lord of gods, offer him food-oblation, tie the Pratisara band (on the wrist) and arrange to urge him to go to sleep.

At the end of the morning twilight period, the priest should conduct township-circumambulation for the Lord, in rightward rotation, and thereafter administer ablution (with water) from fortyeight pitchers, to the Lord's idol, in the pavilion meant for ablution, and then offer him either mega-oblation or profuse oblation. Then he should arrange Homa-rite, at the hands of Vaiṣṇavas, with recitation of hymns beginning with, Viṣṇor nu kam or with those beginning with Jaya or Kuṣmāṇḍaiḥ or with the chants pertaining to Assembly-deities, and concluding with Vyāhṛtis (Om bhuḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ etc.) Then, he should offer one hundred and eight oblations (into fire), while reciting respectively twelve-syllabled and eight-syllabled chants. Then having offered floral palmful, he should salute the Lord by praying 'kindly forgive'. Finally, he should give alms to the preceptor and others.

In case, the omni-flaw atonement is planned at the end of the year, then it has to be on the twelfth lunar date of the white fortnight of the month of Margaśīrṣa. Prior to that day, the priest should undertake sprout-offering rite. Then, on the night prior to the actual ritual day, at the end of routine nocturnal worship, the priest should offer oblations into fire, while reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta as well as Viṣṇu-gāyatrī, in the form of hundred lotuses or Bilva leaves dipped in ghee.

Then he should offer oblations with the hymn-chants pertaining to Supreme self as well as Īṅkāra etc. Thereafter having served the Lord of gods, with water from fourteen pitchers, the priest should decorate him, tie the Pratisara band (on his wrist) and urge Him to go to sleep. Then, after offering oblations along with recitation of the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, goddesses Śrī and Bhūmi deities: Brahmā and Rudra, the chant pertaining to sages and also omni-deity hymn and Viṣṇu-ṣūkta and then he should pass overnight by performance of songs and dances. In the morning having urged the God to wake up, the priest should serve ablution with water from one hundred and eight pitchers, and put ornaments and then deck the sacred sacrificial gold-thread around his neck, after offering floral palmful, along with recitation of Viṣṇu-sūkta. Then the priest should bow down by praying "kindly forgive us for one and all flaws committed by us during routine ritual acts." Then he should offer Prabhūta i.e. sumptous food oblation, take a circum-ambulation around the temple and having offered worship, he should serve food to Brahmins and give Dakṣiṇa amount to the preceptor.

He should pray to God with pardon-chant as follows: Out of ignorance growing to greed for money, whatever misdeed has been committed by me, forgive me for all that, O lord ! Besides, forgive me for whatever faults have been committed by my colleagues or my kinsmen. Thou may pardon for the faults committed by the preceptor, the priest as well as the menial attendants, or devotees in general. Thou mayest pardon for the flaws committed by the king, by royal servants or ministers. So also Thou shouldst pardon the faults committed by village-officers, or the singers, dancers and players on musical instruments.

Kindly accept the leaf, flower, fruit, water and the food-oblation, offered by me, within my affordabilitiy. I know not the procedure of invocation, I know not the farewell too. To whatever birth I approach out of thousands of organic embodiments, let in all of them be my devotion un-deviated in Thee. To conduct the worship rite, as per strict prescribed code is not possible even by the team led by Brahmā etc. What to talk of persons like us who possess little knowledge !. Of course it is impossible. Therefore, after taking note of the unknown flaws, for the atonement of those as well as the uncared flaws, the following common atonement should be practised. All the culmination of the evening juncture, the priest should recite Vaiṣṇava hymn, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī hymn, both twelve-syllabled and eight-syllabled chants and also the prayer: namo brahmaṇe and then offer flowers, at the two feet of the Lord and again pray as kindly forgive (for the lapse). On conclusion of the nocturnal worship, he should extol the Lord with mono-syllabic hymn and other hymns and with the Anuvāka: Nārāyaṇa, he should offer floral palmful.

Let therefore, atonement take place by this ritual of worship, of all the flaws arisen during the routine worship. Kindly forgive for all these malfeasances committed by me, under the guise of true service-courses, O Purusottama, the Supreme person!

Universally, in respect of all kinds of distortion, having occurred in ritual acts, a sacrifice with a beast of prey, made of dough, is to be performed. The professionals of Brāhmic-philosophy, opine that the term Aja means a seed which takes less than three years to sprout (into plant). Hence, actual sacrificing goat is not necessary.

The priest may prepare a goat made of rice-flour-dough, of the height of the sacrificial priest, endowed with all limbs and sub-limbs; and then having smashed it and having sprinkled it, the priest should cut all his limbs while chanting Puruṣa-sūkta, in the order; horns, eyes, head, ears, belly and the tail, and oblate into fire. Thereafter, having performed the Homa, named mega-pacification, ending with Vyāhṛtis, he should give honourarium to the sacrificial priest.

In the event of lapse of worship of the morning twilight worship, he should perform worship ritual, twice at mid-day. Then he should offer oblation while reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta. In the event of lapse of both consecutive worship rituals: morning and mid-day, the priest should perform the same three times in the evening. He should then, conduct ablution to the Lord of Gods with water from seven pitchers; and then serve food to the Brahmins. In case, there occurs lapse of worship for one full day(i.e. morning, mid-day and evening) ritual, then, the priest should perform a special worship-ritual called Tri-periodic, followed by food-oblations. After pouring incessant ghee-oblation into fire, named Dakṣiṇa, and again having performed Homa rite with Vaiṣṇava chants, Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta and with the chants pertaining to Śrī and Bhūmi, the priest should arrange food for Brahmins. In the case of lapse of worship for two days, he should double the expiational ritual. Thus, in the case of lapse of worship extending upto twelve days, the priest should increase the ritual day by day with same ratio. Yet the worshipper should keep fast for that much period.

"Since the observer of fast, is retrieved from sins, and remains stable with selfsame attributes, therefore the fast that is abstinence from consumption of food, is marked by absence of all enjoyment."

When twelfth day has passed over, the priest should oblate stream of ghee into sacred fire, called Dakṣiṇa and then having offered oblations with twice hundred in number, by reciting Vaiṣṇava chants, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and chants pertaining to assembly-gods, the priest should serve ablution to the Lord of gods, with water stored in fortyeight pitchers. He should then offer either mega-oblation or Prabhūta i.e. profuse food-oblation in appropriate mode. Then having gifted cattle to the preceptor, he should also serve feast to Brahmins.

In the contingency of omission of worship for a period of one month, the priest has to kindle fire in four fire-pits, namely, Āhavanīya, Dakṡiṇāgni, Gārhapatya and Āvasathya which are to be constructed respectively four sectors in the directions: east, south, west and north respectively. Then, having conducted Homa by pouring stream of ghee. i.e. Āghāra, the priest should carry out the circum-sprinkling of sacred fire, he should conduct four types of Homas by reciting respectively Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava and Murti chants, on the four directions. Then he should offer oblations by chanting -Devibhyām, Munibhyām- and the chants Vaighna and Garuḍa, followed by Mahā Vyāhṛti-chants. Then he should serve ablution to the Lord of gods, with water from one hundred and eight pitchers. Then he should arrange the recitation of 'auspicious day' declaration. The priest should offer as much adorational material to the Lord as the period of lapse of worship. He should do this by arithmatic progression till the end of one month. Then for two month-lapse, its double, for three months triple and so on he should go on increasing upto one year.

When one year has passed over, the priest should serve ablution to the Lord, with water, taken from either one thousand and eight or one hundred and eight pitchers. Then, he should also offer donation of gold, cows and land and perform mega-pacificatory Homa, for either a week or a month. The priest should offer oblation into fire with one thousand lotuses dipped in ghee, along with recitation of Viṣṇu-gāyatrī and then he should perform re-installation of the image. Thereafter, he should prepare a beast of sacrificial prey, made with the flour of parched rice-grain, endowed with major and minor limbs, and then after decorating it and having killed, sprinkled with water and then having cut its limbs in serial order, i.e. from horns to tail, while reciting Puruṣa-sūkta, he should offer oblation, with those into fire. Then he should conduct mega-pacificatory Homa-rite, while reciting chants, ending with Vyāyhṛtis and then arrange the declaration of auspicious day. Conventionally, by the lapse of worship continuing for over twelve years, the Lord does not continue to dwell in the temple-precincts. Consequently, the ghosts and Brāhmic demons, choose residence therein. Hence, having executed the acts of ploughing etc., with gold plough and having renovated the shrine, the priest should undertake purification of the site and then carryout Homa ritual with lotus oblations and then conduct re-installation ritual.

In case, there occurs death of a human being outside the enclosure yet within the range of fifty Daṇḍas (or hundred metres), then the priest should not perform worship of the Lord of gods as well as food-offering until the corpse has been carried away therefrom. He should just offer flowers to both: stationary and service-idols. Subsequently, after reasonable time has lapsed, having performed pacificatory Homa he should doubly worship the Lord. If inadvertently, worship and food-offering happens to be done, prior to removal of the corpse, then having bathed the idol with pure water, he should worship God after offering oblation while chanting 'Yad devādyaiḥ' and then serve food offering.

In the case of domestic worship, if omission takes place in respect of the worship at morning time, one should conduct evening worship twice. In the same way he should go on doubling the quantum of worship corresponding to progressive adorational lapses. One should also offer food to Brahmins. In the case of omission of domestic worship for a continued period of twelve days, one should offer oblations into fire with recitation of Puruṣa-sūkta as well as Viṣṇu-sūkta. Then, having conducted routine worship, one should offer food oblation in double quantity. Further more, in the case of adorational lapses within the range of one month to one year, one should perform ablution to the deity with water from seven pitchers and then conduct Homa while chanting Mūla-mantra. In the case of year-long adorational lapse, one should execute purificational rite with the help of such ritual as circum-rotation of sacred fire and sprinkling of penta-cow-products, one should re-install the image. Thereafter he should offer oblation into fire only once, by way of mega-pacificatory rite. In the event of the idol being contaminated by in-eligible person, such as reverse cross-breds, morally degraded as well as abusers of Vedas etc. One should bathe the deity with water from seven pitchers and subsequently conduct Mūla-Homa with recitation of Viṣṇu-sūkta and Puruṣa-sūkta and Brāhma-sūkta followed by the oblation while chanting the Mantra - Yaddevaḥ- one should then feed the Brahmins.

5. Atonement for flaws in Ablution

If the scheduled time for ablution has lapsed, the priest should conduct the mega-pacificatory rite. If lapse occurs, in respect of daily routine ablution, he should first conduct Homa, by reciting Vaiṣṇava chants, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Puruṣa-sūkta and Varuṇa hymn and then bathe the God with water from pitchers, twice in number. If the ablution to be conducted at the durational period of eclipses (solar and lunar), he should conduct expiatory or atonemental Homa rite as in previous case and then arrange the ablution. If the priest fails to perform the wish-fulfilling ablutions, he should carry out the expiatory fire-oblations, as before. Or he may bathe the deity with pure water. If the occasional ablution occurs at evening time, then having completed the occasional worship, he should perform daily routine worship. Alternatively, he should mutter the Vaiṣṇava chant for one hundred times.

At the time of ablutional ritual, if omission takes place, in respect of tying of the Pratisara-band, followed by urging god for sleeping, then having done fire-oblation, by chanting Vaiṣṇava and the hymns pertaining to goddesses Śrī and Bhūmi and Sudarśana, then at that time, having skipped over the ritual retention for urging God to go to sleep, the priest may execute the tying of Pratisara band only (i.e. directly). In the case of mono-iconic installation, he has to skip over the sleeping etiquette for the Lord on service-icon, the priest should undertake Pratisara-tying with immediate effect. If the ritual act of waking up of the God who is asleep, the priest has to conduct Homa by chanting Saura, Saumya and Vaiṣṇava hymns concluding with Vyāhṛti chants, he should lift the idol, sprinkle with water and then conduct worship.

If some drawback is noticed in the measurement of the containers for sowing the seeds for sprouting, such as Pālikā, Ghaṭikā and Śarāva etc. having different shapes, that is deficiency or excess, then for the notional rectification thereof, the priest should conduct Homa-rite by chanting the Mantras relating to those respective presiding deities as well as the Vaiṣṇava mantra. If Pālikā containers, that is platters are not available, then the priest may sow seeds in the jars or Śarāvas. In case of lapse of sowing sprouting seeds, the priest should conduct Homa with the hymns addressed to Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Varuṇa, Vighna, and the deities: Paṅktīśa, Soma and Śānta as well as iconic chants pertaining to Jaya etc. Having fully arranged white flowers; lotus etc. in the platter, the priest should contemplate those in the form of sprouts. After the ritual of sprout offering, if ablution is skipped over, the priest should conduct fire-oblation by chanting the hymns: Vaiṣṇava and Saumya as well as those pertaining to twin goddesses: Śrī and Bhūmi and also the Vaighna Hymn and then he should perform ablution. Some experts express a dissenting note that the priest may carry out ablution even without sprout-offering.

If the pavilion erected for ablutional ceremony, either lacks in dimension or is excessive, then to compensate that the priest may conduct Homa by reciting Vaiṣṇava and Bhauma hymns. At the time of conducting ablution, the priest should serve it to goddess Śānti in the northern sector of the temple, to goddess Puṣti in the eastern sector, to goddess Mukti in the southern sector, Bala in the western sector and the deity conferring on cherished objects in the north-eastern sector. Yet he should not conduct ablution in the south-east, south-west and north-west respectively, otherwise, i.e. in case it is so done, then the priest should conduct Homa rite by recitation of chants addressed to the respective directional deities and also the Vaiṣṇava hymns; and conduct ablution afresh. If the arch of ablutional pavilion happens to be defective, the priest should carry out fire oblation by chanting Mantras addressed to those respective entrance doors and the Vaiṣṇava Mantras. In case inversion of arches etc. occurs then the priest should recite the Mantras pertaining to each respective presiding deity and in respect of complete omission of erection of the arches, the priest should recite the following hymn: Vaighna, Vaiṣṇava, Saura, Saumya, Prājāpatya and Saudarśana and in the event of lapse of proportion in the rows the priest should recite the mantra pertaining to the Lord of the row and also Vaiṣṇava and Pañcabhautika chants and simultaneously conduct fire-oblation.

It is to be noted that the guardian deity of the temple tower is regarded as Mitra or Paṅktīśa. In case deficiency creeps in the dimension of the altar, then the priest should offer worship to the site ending with the service of reverential water. Then having placed a seat of grass mat or a piece of cloth either inside the pendal or on open plot, the priest may carry out ablution. If the pit dug for construction of the altar or platform or ablution happens to be lacking in proportion, then the Homa termed, as Medinī should be performed. In the contingency of lack of conventional dimension in respect of the pit or the rope or its excess, the priest should carry out fire-oblation by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn or the hymn addressed to twin deities: Śrī and Bhūmi and then the mantra of Paṅktīśa. If the proportional size of the pitcher is either less or more, then the priest should conduct Homa by reciting the hymns pertaining to Viṣṇu, Brahmā, Sun, Moon, Wind and Fire followed by mega-Vyāhṛti and ending with simple Vyāhṛti i.e. Bhuḥ, Bhuvaḥ, Suvaḥ. Then the priest should procure another pitcher satisfying the prescribed characteristic. In case the pitcher breaks, then having procured another one, the priest should conduct fire oblation with Vaiṣṇava chant, then he should mutter either twelve-syllabled chant (Om Namo Bhagavate Vāsudevāya) or eight syllabled chant (Om Namo Nārāyaṇāya) by eight thousand repetitions.

If the ablutional pitcher happens to be touched by a vile person, the priest should procure another pitcher, fill it with water as in previous case and having touched it, the priest should mutter the chant pertaining to that deity or pertaining to Viṣṇu. He should also perform Homa by chanting the Mantras addressed to the deity presiding over the pitcher or the hymn pertaining to Viṣṇu and Brahmā. The priest should offer fire- oblation within the congregation of pitcher by reciting Vaiṣṇava chants and Vyāhṛti. If the pitcher is contaminated by a dog, crow and such other inauspicious creatures, the priest should conduct Śānti Homa and Vaiṣṇava Homa. Then he should fill another pitcher and charge it with eight syllabled chant.

If the soil is not available in the land which is duly prescribed for the sake of ablution, then having taken it as per availability the priest should perform fire-oblation by chanting the hymns pertaining to the goddess Bhūmi and also to Viṣṇu and Brahmā. In respect of collection of ablutional material, if the mount lacks in prescribed measurement, then the priest should offer oblation to fire by reciting Vaiṣṇava and Āgneya hymns. In the cases of lapse of preparing the mount or lapse of adding those relevant points to it, the same atonement-rite is to be repeated. In case all kinds of food-grains are not available for the purpose of ablution, then the priest should fetch barley as representative food-grain, or else he may take whatever food-grain is available and then he should conduct Homa, by reciting hymns of Vāyu, Viṣṇu and Brahmā as supplemental-rite. In the cases of lapse of quantum ratio of food-grain or the omission of food-grains altogether, the same expiation is to be repeated. If sprouting seeds are not available, he should fetch Dūrvā-blades as substitute and compensate by fire-oblations by chanting Saumya, Vaiṣṇava and Garuḍa hymns followed by Vyāhṛtis. If putting up of eight auspicious objects is forgotten or the painting of those with respective colours or the proportion is forgotten, then the priest should conduct Homa-rite by chanting Vaiṣṇava hymn, Aindra hymn and mega Vyāhṛtis.

If the objects like bathing seat etc. lacks in size, then he should carry out Homa-rite, by chanting Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma, Ārṣa and Saura hymns. If the items like penta-cow-products etc. lack in quantity, then the priest should fill the main pitcher with water, and he should supplement the shortage by offering Homa-rite accompanied by the Mantra addressed to the presiding deity of those items, followed by Vaiṣṇava chants. Wherever, either consumption or sprinkling of penta-cow-products has been prescribed, in that case, this expiatory code is to be deemed as universally applicable. If the prescribed blending proportion of the five cow-products is omitted, then the priest should perform Homa by chanting Raudra and Vaiṣṇava hymns. If recitation of Mantra at the time of blending of the five component cow-products is lost, then he should touch the blend with palm and repeat the prescribed mantra twice.

If the honey required for ablution is not available, then he should conduct the ablution by taking water as substitute and supplementing it with a Homa along with chanting of the first Mantra of Ṛgveda, i.e. Agnimīle purohitam and Vaiṣṇava chant. If scented water or sandal-paste water is not available or is available in lesser quantity, then he should oblate with the chant of the presiding deity or Vaiṣṇava chant. If unbroken rice is not available, then the priest should perform Homa with Ārṣa, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma and Saumya hymns. If all kinds of fruits are not available, then having collected whatever are available, he should perform compensatory Homa, by reciting Saumya and Vaiṣṇava hymns being concluded by Vyāhṛtis. If blades of Kuśa grass are not available for preparation of water blended with Kuśas, the priest may put Darbha ends as substitute. Then he should conduct Homa by recitation of Ārṣa, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma and Aindra hymns. For the purpose of preparation of water mixed with gems, if five prescribed gems are not available, then having taken Amṛta(gold) and silver, he should offer oblation into fire by reciting Vaiṣṇava hymn and also Viṣṇu-sūkta as well as the hymns pertaining to Brahmā and Rudra. If lapse of chanting the mantra assigned for the water accompanied by chant-muttering, the priest should mutter Vaiṣṇava Mantra hundred times and then perform Homa by recitation of Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta. If all medicinal herbs meant for ablution are not available, then the priest should fetch paddy and rice grains. Then he should conduct fire-oblation along with recitation of Āditya, Vaiṣṇava, Brāhma and Raudra hymns accompanied by Vyāhṛtis. Then he should conduct chant-muttering. If sacred flowers are not available, he should collect other flowers, as per availability and conduct Homa by chanting Dhātṛ Mantra as well as Vaiṣṇava-mantra. If all kinds of sacred powders are not acquired, then having selected Uṣira grass or only the green gram the priest should perform Homa-rite by chanting Saudarśana or Vaiṣṇava hymns. If ingredients for Kaśāya or decoction for ablutional service are not available, then the priest may fetch the bark of fig-tree and supplement it by Homa, with Varuṇa and Vaiṣṇava hymn-recitation.

In case no water from all sacred fords is available, then the priest may bring water from local river and to supplement it, he should perform Homa by reciting Gāṅgeya and Vaiṣṇava Mantras followed by Vyāhṛtis. If none of all kinds of perfumes are available, the priest may fetch sandal wood, then he should perform Homa with the recitation of Aindra and Vaiṣṇava hymns ending with Vyāhṛtis. If blotting cloth is not available, then the priest may blot the ablutional idol with some other cloth; and he should offer fire-oblation by chanting Vaiṣṇava Mantras, hymn pertaining to Īvaṣta and Viṣṇu-sūkta.

In case of non-availability of Mūlagandha, the priest should collect Dūrvā blades. Then he should conduct Homa by reciting hymns pertaining to Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Prajāpati. If none of all mineral is available, then Jāti-Hingulika is to be accepted. Then he should chant Durgā-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta and offer oblation. Conventionally the mineral named Jati-Hingulika is applied to palms, soles of the feet and lips. Likewise the mineral named Haritāla and Manaḥ-Śila are to be applied to ornaments and dresses. Anjana or collyrium is to be applied either to all the limbs or to the pair of eye-lids of the idol. Alternatively, Gorocana i.e. powder of cows bile may be applied to both the eyes, face or all over the iconic body. In this way, the priest should decorate the idol at proper places with minerals. In case of misplacement or distortion, the priest may offer fire-oblation by chanting Daurga and Vaiṣṇava hymns.

If twelve types of dresses or apparels are not available, then the priest should offer oblation by chanting Mantras addressed to the deities Viṣṇu and Śrī, by way of atonement, and then he may cover the idol with eight or four garments, he may serve ablution. If ornaments are not available then the priest may perform Homa by chanting hymns addressed to Ṣānmukha and Viṣṇu. In respect of the ritual of ablution, if the adoration with each individual ingredient, happens to be omitted, then the priest may conduct expiation as in the case of routine worship. If there occurs non-permitted admixture of location, then a priest should worship the deity twice and then place him at proper location. If the material is upset due to locational distortion, then the priest should offer sacrifice by chanting the relevant deity-oriented hymn and Vaiṣṇava hymn. He should not serve ablution by that particular material-item; in case it is already done, then the priest should cleanse it and bathe the deity with pure water.

Ablution is not to be executed with ghee either of she-goat or she-buffalo. Otherwise he should recite Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta and Pāramātmika and Īṅkāra and similar chants and perform Anga-Homa fire-oblation. He should also offer one hundred and eight oblations enchanted by the first mantra of Sāmaveda. The priest should serve ablution to the deity by penta-cow-products. If curds which is defective happens to be selected, then the priest should go on offering oblations into fire, by reciting Vaiṣṇava chants, the beginning mantra of Yajurveda followed by mega-Vyāhṛti chants ending with Vyāhṛtis. If milk is found to be defective then the priest should go on offering oblations into fire by reciting six Vaiṣṇava chants and also with the chant śan no devīḥ. In the eventuality of the ablutional material being contaminated by dog and similar other impure creatures, the priest may set aside that material and procure other material. Then he should sprinkle the spot with penta-cow-products and water mixed with Kuśa blades. If some germs or worms are noticed in the ghee, then having stained it with cloth-strainer and boiled, should oblate with the Mantras: Devādi etc. after sprinkling the same. Then the priest should sacrifice with recitation of beginning Sāman of Sāmaveda, followed by Vaiṣṇava hymn. If germs and insects happen to fall in the ablutional material, then he should discard it and procure other material and atone by offering Homa with recitation of chants pertaining to those respective presiding deity of material items, preceded by Vaiṣṇava hymn.

If the material gathered for ablution is burnt in fire, the priest should perform Āgneya, Varuṇa, Saumya and Vaiṣṇava Homas and fetch other fresh material. If somehow, there occurs unapproved admixture of ingredients or inversion thereof or if there is omission of adoration of those respective presiding deities of corresponding ingredients or if Mantras get clubbed together or if Mantra recitation is altogether omitted, then the priest should offer one hundred and eight oblations with recitation of Vaiṣṇava hymn.

If the following types of ablution, namely, turmeric water-bath, ablution of the conch and lotus and the ablution with water strained through one thousand-pore strainer happen to be omitted, then he should perform Homa-rite by chanting Puruṣa-sūkta, Viṣṇu-sūkta, Vaiṣṇava and Sudarśana hymns and Viṣṇu-Gāyatrī. If at the time of ablution, if the priest fails to put on clothes to the idol, then he should offer oblation by chanting Mantras pertaining to Śrī and Viṣṇu. Then he should honour the preceptor by offering clothes. If the priest forgets to worship Viṣvaksena, then he should perform Vaiṣṇava and Viṣvaksena Homa. If he fails to worship Paṅktīśa, then he should offer oblations by chanting His Mantra and Jayādi Mantras. In case of omission of adoration of Indra and his colleagues, then he should offer fire-oblation by chanting the Mantras, pertaining to Indra and His colleagues.

For the sake of pacification of all possible flaws occurring during ablution-ceremony, the priest offer fire-oblations, by reciting the following Vedic hymns; Puruṣa-sūkta and Viṣṇu-sūkta, then Pāramātmika and Īṅkāra, Śrī-sūkta and allied chants, hymns pertaining to Rātri and Durgā as well as the Mantras named Pañca-vāruṇa, Jayādi and Vaiṣṇava. If prior to ablution oiling of the body is done to the idol, then it would become Āsura type of ablution. In that case, the priest should rectify the flaw by serving fresh-water ablution begging pardon by prayer - O God, kindly forgive!- And by worshipping afresh, and performing mega-pacificatory Homa-rite and then conduct the ablution once more.

In the mishap of falling of the idol from the hands of the priest due to nap, the priest should bathe the idol with penta-cow-products, followed by water shower. Then he should touch the image on head, navel and both feet while muttering Suvaḥ, Bhuvaḥ and Bhūḥ (i.e. inverse Vyāhṛti), he should perform Vaiṣṇava Homa and install the image inside the pit. Similarly, the ablution of the God along with goddesses is termed also as demonic. To rectify the mistake, priest should bathe them separately after doing pacificatory Homa. So also if the major portion of cooked food is spoiled by germs, insects, flies etc., the priest should pick up cooked rice of about two-Prastha quantity and after sprinkling it with water blended with sacred ashes, along with chant-muttering he should parch it with Darbha splinter and having soaked the same in ghee, he should thereafter offer it to God.
